Farmer shoots 23-pound grasshopper!

Fed-up farmer Barry Gisler crept into his corn field with a rifle to find out what was making such a commotion out there — and bagged himself a 23-pound grasshopper!

"The damn thing spit a full quart of tobacco juice in my face before I finally brought it down," the dumbfounded farmer told reporters in Reefton, New Zealand.

Barry turned the humongous hopper over to insect specialists, who say they've never seen anything like it.

"Hopefully, it's one of a kind," said bug specialist Robert Scholl.

"A swarm of these things could level all of New Zealand in a single afternoon."

DEVIL'S UNSOLVED

No tale of the unknown has captured the public's imagination as have the chilling chronicles of eerie encounters and mysterious happenings spawned within the invisible boundaries of the most sinister and threatening place on Earth — the Devil's Triangle!

History records that when Christopher Columbus made his search for the New World, he became the first seaman to voyage through the Devil's Triangle. His account of erratic compasses, great flames of fire and the appearance of ghostly lights drifting slowly over the sea spread among sailors everywhere and the legend was born!

The list of planes, ships and people lost in that veiled limbo of the damned has grown through the centuries and who would dare say it won't go on and on in the centuries to come?

Here then are five more mind-boggling encounters in the Devil's Triangle. Fact or fantasy? You decide.

Girl, 5, born in Devil's Triangle can read minds!

A 5-year-old girl, born during a cruise through the Devil's Triangle, has the psychic ability to read minds and to move small objects with a single glance!

Noted German psychotherapist Gunter Bell refused to identify the child when he discussed her case in an interview with reporters shortly after she was found.

In that interview, Dr. Bell said that her amazing powers had been documented over the course of a 17-month study. What's more, he said, she had begun to develop a number of unusual

NURSE'S INCREDIBLE VOYAGE OF TERROR!

Sailor Shannon Bracy dared venture into the most forbidden waters on earth and came face-to-face with unimaginable horror — these airmen and seamen doomed to wander forever in the limbo of the Devil's Triangle.

For 13 nightmarish hours, the 42-year-old New Zealand nurse battled to escape an unseen force that had snatched her from the realm of the living. "I was told it was all just a terrible dream," Shannon said. "How I wish it were as simple as that. I don't believe the human mind could think up such stark horror.

"I sailed into a hellish place — the Devil's Triangle — and I was chosen. By whom or by what I don't know. But I believe I was pulled into another dimension and I thought I was to be the next to vanish without a trace in those God-forsaken waters."

Shannon's ordeal began two days into the final leg of her solo voyage from Christchurch, N.Z., to Bermuda. It was an odyssey that had filled her dreams since her childhood when she sailed the waters of Pegasus Bay with her father. "After my husband died, I invested his insurance money and bought myself and our two sons an ex-navy's guy. Then, two years ago, I took my savings and bought Spindrift, my sloop, left the boys with their grandparents and went on my dream voyage.

"Upon my approach to Bermuda, I was sitting in the cockpit entering my exact position in the log," she recalled.

"Suddenly I noticed that everything was getting kind of misty . . . as though a fog was rolling in. In a matter of a minute or so, it was as though I was in a blizzard. Everything was stark white. I could barely make out my hand in front of my face.

"And then it happened! Suddenly I was in a different place. I could no longer see the sea or the sky. I was in a void and I was plunging down, down, down into a glowing pit. Then the faces came. They just seemed to loom up in front of me and then just fade away in a whir. They just came and went without any sound. It was as still as death itself.

"I saw men in uniform . . .

facial characteristics that might be related to her eerie birth in the Devil's Triangle.

"It's like watching the metamorphosis of caterpillar to butterfly," he said.

"The child's eyes have almost doubled in size over the past 14 months and they now have a marked upward slant that they didn't have when she was younger.

"Even more intriguing, her forehead is getting higher because her brain is growing at an explosive pace. It is totally out of sync with the rest of her body and is actually giving her head a bell-like shape. I have never seen anything like this in my professional career.

"If these changes signal the development of even greater psychic powers, there is no telling what the future holds for this girl.

"She can already lift and move small objects from as far as 15 feet away simply by gazing at them. And she is almost 50 percent accurate in reading the unspoken thoughts of people around her."

Bell said the child is the first person on either side of her family to have extraordinary abilities of any kind.

And without coming right out and saying it, he suggested that her genetic makeup might have been altered by someone or something in the Devil's Triangle.

"She was born on a voyage from the Bahamas to Miami that was marked by a 45-minute period in which everyone aboard began to feel strangely distracted, disoriented and apprehensive," Bell explained.

"No one was ever able to determine what brought about those changes in thought and perception."

LITTLE girl's brain is getting bigger by the day!

But the girl's father remembered sensing a strange presence on the ship while his daughter was being born. He described the incident as unsettling. Both he and his wife believe that their child's powers are the result of something that happened on that trip."

The couple's initial reaction to their daughter's budding powers was astonishment that turned to fear, Bell said.

They have since come to grips with their anxiety. But there is still a danger that the girl herself will be unable to cope, he said.

"Our biggest job now is to protect her from other people and herself," he continued. "The media would like nothing better than to find this child and turn her into a carnival freak by displaying her on tabloid television shows.

"If we fail in our efforts to help her understand her powers, it is possible that she could destroy herself."

Bell voiced that grim warning in May 1987. Since then he has devoted his life to her care and protection and today continues to monitor the girl's amazing development.

UNSOLVED MYSTERIES

Bride who vanished in the Devil's Triangle reappears — 40 YEARS LATER!

A bride who vanished on a honeymoon cruise in the Devil's Triangle met her shocked husband for an eerie reunion on the same haunted sea where she disappeared — 40 years ago!

When 58-year-old Tom Pleasants pulled his new sailboat alongside an old boat flying a distress signal in the feared Triangle region, he expected to find salty sailors aboard. Instead, the stunned Pleasants saw a beautiful young woman he recognized as the bride he took nearly 40 years ago — and he watched in amazement as the girl stepped smiling onto his boat.

"I thought for a minute I had died and was in heaven," Pleasants recalled.

For two days and nights, Pleasants talked, laughed, ate and spooned with his first true love.

He said the woman told him her name was Regina — the same as his bride — and then recalled certain events only his lost bride would remember. "She told me the church we were married in, the name of the preacher even that I put on two different colored socks on our wedding day. I knew beyond a doubt, I had found Regina."

Regina

Tom Pleasants was a husky 22-year-old in 1949, freshly discharged from the U.S. Navy. He married his childhood sweetheart in New York City and the young lovebirds then honeymooned in Florida. With an inheritance, Tom bought a small sailboat he christened Miss Regina.

Tom Pleasants

The two set sail from Miami, visiting exotic ports in the semitropical splendor of the Bahamas. Then on a perfect day with the Atlantic Ocean shimmering and calm, they sailed east — straight into the Devil's Triangle. "It was sudden," recalled Pleasants.

"We were going along just fine when we hit a vicious squall. It was like a hand from hell picked us up and smashed us back in the water. I was pitched out of the boat.

"I could hear Regina calling me but I couldn't swim back. I must have blacked out." When Pleasants came to, the water was calm and he was being hauled aboard a fishing boat. "The captain said he'd seen no storm, that they'd just seen me floating on a piece of wood. The Miss Regina was never found. And I lost my wonderful bride."

Pleasants never remarried. "I could never look at another woman without thinking of Regina," he said. Then last summer, Pleasants bought a new boat and sailed back into the fateful Triangle that had changed his life years before.

"After our two-day reunion, I crashed," says Pleasants. "I slept for jackets. I saw other men and women — even little children. But they were all dead.

"Suddenly, I realized what was happening to me. I was being pulled into the limbo of the lost. I began to fight back the only way I knew how — I began to pray. I begged God to help me, to rescue me from the grip of [illegible] don't let me go this way. Please! Help me to live.'

"The next thing I knew, I was back in the cockpit of Spindrift and the sky was clear and filled with stars. I thought it had been some terrible nightmare that had lasted only a minute or two. But when I looked at my electronic timer, I saw that it was after midnight. My 'dream' had

MAN'S CORPSE COMES BACK TO LIFE!

Fishing boat skipper Barney Spooner died and was buried at sea. But his engine was snatched by the mysterious forces of the Devil's Triangle — and was returned to the realm of the living!

For more than 72 hours, the 65-year-old seaman from Bermuda drifted in the limbo of the lost, the triangular graveyard in the Atlantic where hundreds of planes, ships and people have vanished without a trace.

"I saw them all, the sightless eyes, the lifeless shapes, the ghost ships and the phantom planes of that unholy place," Capt. Spooner said as he lay in his berth aboard his 110-foot jetsetter Matilda II, now resting at anchor in the bay of Ireland Island.

"It was like some unimaginable nightmare, but I remember that I wasn't afraid. They were all dead. But I knew that I was as dead as they were.

"Yet, I had the feeling that I wasn't really one of them . . . that I was merely an observer. I had the feeling I was in a world where I didn't belong."

Capt. Spooner's journey to the netherworld began when he suffered a heart attack aboard the Matilda II while fishing in the fertile waters off the Bermuda Islands.

Aboard the sleek steel-hulled boat were his 62-year-old wife, Lillian, and their grandsons, Jonathan and Bartholomew, and a crew of 3 men.

"There's no doubt in our minds that grandfather died," 20-year-old Jonathan said. "He just keeled over and that was it. He had no heartbeat, no pulse and no breathing. He was dead.

"We were going to take him into St. George and notify the authorities, but grandmother wouldn't hear of it. She said, 'Dad always insisted that he be buried at sea

Devil sent ships back in time

and that's just the way it will be — here and now.'

"And that's what we did. We wrapped him in a blanket, tied it up and attached an old anchor and threw him in the sea he loved."

What happened next isn't clear to Capt. Spooner. He remembers only that he was suddenly in a veiled and alien world, as though he awoke from a dream that plunged him into a nightmare.

"I saw them all . . . every one of those ships and planes that had been swallowed up in the Devil's Triangle," said Spooner. "I saw the lost ships — the Cyclops, the Marine Sulphur Queen, the Rafaku Maru and Witchcraft.

"And I saw the planes — the five Navy Avengers, the Star Tiger and so many other planes. They were everywhere . . . hundreds of them.

"And I saw the faces of all the people who had vanished over the decades. There were so many. They drifted past me like a slow motion film. They had no expression on their faces. They were just images frozen in time."

Spooner has no idea how long his incredible journey in the land of the damned lasted. He only remembers his body feeling a strange crushing sensation. Then he was suddenly looking down at the sea from above and seeing his own lifeless body bobbing in the water.

Capt. Spooner

"I could see everything as plain as day," he said. "I knew it was me in the water. And I could see the Mu-hide II cleaving through the sea, coming right at my body. I saw my boat slow, then stop dead. Bartholomew put the dinghy over the side and rowed over to me. Suddenly, I wasn't up above looking down anymore. I was in the water with my eyes wide open — and I was looking up into the face of my grandson. He stared at me as though he was seeing a ghost. Then he just pulled me into the dinghy and rowed back to the boat."

Though Spooner has no recollection of time, his wife and grandsons said 72 hours had passed between the time his corpse was committed to the sea and the time he was spotted and pulled aboard the dinghy — alive. "He died and we all know that," Lillian Spooner said. "And we did just what he wanted us to do — we buried him at sea.

"How his spirit got into that outer place, only God knows. But he didn't belong there and he couldn't stay. Maybe the only way he could

Five warplanes vanished in 1945 while flying over the Devil's Triangle! Where are they now?

LOST SQUADRON LAST SEEN ORBITING MARS

An astronomer who claims he spotted America's lost warplanes orbiting Mars thinks they might be part of Flight 19, a bomber group that vanished in the Devil's Triangle in 1945.

Dr. Claude Laelin said he sighted four of the five missing Grumman Avenger bombers in space with a computerized telescope that enhances images as they enter the lens.

He estimated the planes were miles from Mars when he first sighted them. They were traveling an estimated 26,000 m.p.h., however, making it impossible for him to observe them for more than a few minutes before they disappeared.

"This is the most exciting astronomical discovery since the Soviets found an American bomber on the moon," the expert told reporters in Basel, Switzerland. "The planes were flying in tight formation and were obviously in good condition. They appeared to be manned. And I could also see the insignias of the American military.

"That's why I believe they are the same planes the U.S. Navy lost on a training flight over the Devil's Triangle on Dec. 5, 1945."

U.S. officials refused to comment on Dr. Laelin's report. But one of his former assistants went so far as to allege that the expert — still reeling from the recent death of his wife — is letting his imagination get the best of him.

"I expected some stonewalling and criticism so this commentary doesn't bother me in the least," said Dr. Laelin. "But I have no idea what these planes were doing in space. And I have no idea how they got there."

Dr. Claude Laelin, left, spotted four Grumman Avenger bombers flying near the planet Mars, above.

Wilhelm Greder, chairman of the Swiss UFO group CONTACT, was much less reserved in his assessment of the situation.

He flatly stated that the planes that a Soviet satellite photographed on the moon last spring.

"We've got to get to the bottom of this — and we've got to do it now!" said the expert.

"We know there is a connection between the Devil's Triangle and these planes.

BOMBER FOUND ON MOON!

PERFECTLY PRESERVED AMERICAN AIRPLANE [redacted] IN CRATER!

One of the greatest space mysteries of all time was uncovered by a Russian satellite that photographed a vintage American warplane on the moon!

Pictures beamed back to Earth showed the World War II bomber to be in near pristine condition but they couldn't answer the one question that scientists the world over are still asking: How did such a primitive airplane fly into space and wind up on the moon?

"We have absolutely no explanation for this and seriously doubt that we ever will," said Dr. Stanislav Makeyev, the Russian scientist who released computer-enhanced photos of the airplane a few weeks after it was discovered in March 1989.

"We can speculate that the plane was hijacked by extraterrestrials and taken to the moon but we have no evidence to support that theory," he added. "It really is anybody's guess as to how the airplane got there."

U.S. officials repeatedly declined to comment on the Russian photos, which led to persistent allegations of a coverup. Dr. Makeyev himself insisted that the photographs are genuine.

And there is no denying that the pictures show an American bomber on the moon.

From the very beginning, space researchers called on both the American and Russian governments to send mechanical probes, or an actual manned expedition, to the moon to investigate further.

Unfortunately, the bomber vanished four months after it was found, leaving no clue to what happened to it.

At the time Dr. Makeyev said: "The airplane is gone — and there's not even an imprint in the dust to show that it was there in the first place."

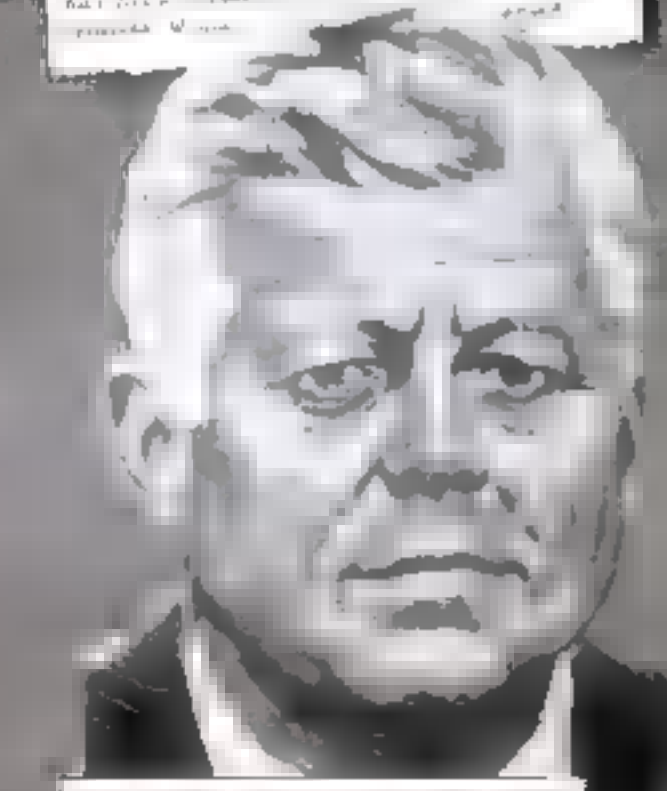
Dr. Wilhelm Gruber, of the Swiss UFO research group CONTACT, was the first scientist of renown to insist that space aliens took the warplane to the moon in an elaborate UFO. "From the beginning we speculated that the airplane had been hijacked by extraterrestrials and the fact that it vanished made us even more certain of an alien connection," he said.

"The bomber is a big, clumsy airplane and certainly not capable of flying into space or out of a crater. It would have taken a spaceship of enormous size to move it and we're sure that is what happened."

Dr. Makeyev concluded: "The disappearance of the airplane is most mysterious and distressing. It's almost as if someone or something was aware of our investigation and took it before we found out too much."

JFK

"JFK assassinated!" These were the words that shocked the world, broke America's heart and cast a shadow over our nation's conscience for almost 30 years — until the truth finally exposed the lie!



The bombshell announcement that the NEWS would publish on May 27, 1992 issue (top) after editors received a letter (see portrait above) from a mercenary soldier in Poland who revealed that JFK not only survived the assassination attempt but was living in a Polish convalescence center. The NEWS commissioned a forensic artist to do the portrait above using scientific studies to show how Kennedy looked at the age of 75.

Edited by DICK DONOVAN

This incredible picture was published by a Canadian newspaper in 1971 — eight years after JFK's alleged death — and purportedly shows Kennedy in a wheelchair at a secret hideout. Photography experts are convinced of its authenticity. Inset at right is a computer-enhanced close-up that clearly shows JFK's features.

HIS 'ASSASSINATION' WAS AMERICA'S BIGGEST HOAX!

ON NOV. 22, 1963, a rain of bullets transformed a peaceful, tree-lined boulevard in Dallas into the setting for the darkest mystery in U.S. history and the greatest hoax ever perpetrated on the American people — the phony death of John F. Kennedy!

Within minutes of the shooting, unnerving newsmen, who'd been told that the President was dead, spread the false story to every corner of the globe: "JFK Assassinated!"

But the incredible truth was finally exposed by Weekly World News in an exclusive story in its Aug. 31, 1993 edition. The story revealed that John F. Kennedy — though critically wounded that day in Dallas, was still very much alive.

That staggering revelation was made in a letter from Dr. Sonya Fusco, a Polish neurosurgeon who, on the 30 years since he was shot, has served as both Kennedy's personal physician and his closest friend and confidante.

"The world was led to believe that President Kennedy was assassinated by Lee Harvey Oswald," she wrote. "But he is alive, conscious and aware of the events of his life.

"Mr. Kennedy suffered brain damage and was left paralyzed from the waist down. But he is still kind and has remained active in American politics since his alleged death in 1963."

In her letter Dr. Fusco painted a mind-boggling scenario of intrigue in which the President, knowing he was targeted for death, enlisted the aid of powerful politicians and businessmen to quash reports that one of the country's most beloved leaders was stricken by an assassin.

That decision came to pass just two days after the shooting in Dallas. Kennedy was flown in a private ambulance jet to a rendezvous point in Poland.

At the same time, members of the shocked American media were gathered to cover the news of a coup. Instead, a team of doctors led by Dr. Fusco had secretly whisked the President to Arlington National Cemetery.

With that, the greatest feat in American history had been pulled off without a hitch.

Dr. Fusco's report was printed from her typed transcript of a doctor less than three months after the politically motivated phony shooting of a white Secret Service agent dressed in the President's clothes.

There on April 25, 1964 — the opening days of Operation Desert Storm, all American eyes were peeled when they saw a spectacular photograph showing the "dead" ex-President peering from a window in the White House.

Taken by a Associated Press photographer based in Washington, D.C. that picture — the most successful subterfuge in history, was designed to convince the world that Kennedy was still alive.

While government officials refused to comment on the Kennedy presence in the White House, one high placed source did, in effect, confirm it when he commented, "the camera doesn't lie."

John Kennedy was the only man on Earth who can see this country through the crisis in the Middle East and he's risking everything — even his life — to help get the job done," the source explained.

"Thank God, he's in the White House, advising President Bush on how to deal with Iraq."

The question of whether Kennedy is dead or alive was put to rest once and for all last February, when a picture of his bare chest in Arlington casket was subjected to an electronic scanner. It revealed that the grave is empty!

Photo experts all agree the photographs of JFK are authentic and have not been retouched, altered or enhanced in any way.

While the Kennedy family and a handful of planted and orchestrated hoax designed to prevent further assassination attempts, the actual cover-up of Dallas was real and the world was told unequivocally.

The Warren Commission's Report on the assassination, with a flagrant disregard of overwhelming evidence that Lee Harvey Oswald was the sole assassin and that the murder of the leader of Dallas strip joint owner Jack Ruby was merely an act of revenge.

While the President Kennedy is without a doubt the greatest mystery in American history, the reason is because that story is quite simply so much bigger.

The NEWS has learned the longer President Bush is able to keep the identity of his would be killer, and assert top to a secret close to Kennedy, the more time he has to build the Desperate Assassination plot defies belief.

"The plotter is the last person anyone would ever suspect," the source said.

The great hoax began as the presidential motorcade moved through Dallas. Below left at the President's past. It was played out before a million of mourners and a large on the 40th anniversary of the assassination.

The frozen body was found in 1990 inside an old freezer of a modern laboratory that had been added onto a lab near Dresden, Germany.

"We were testing the effects of frigid temperatures on military equipment when we came across the old freezer filled with 14 bodies in all," said Dr. Hans Habermann.

All of the bodies had rotted, thawed and decomposed or were in bad condition, except the one that doctors believe was a wealthy New York businessman when he died Nov. 12, 1936. Dying cancer patient begs Cancer-stricken Tom Donaldson wants someone to chop off his head before he is dead and freeze it until surgeons can later re-attach it to a healthy body.

A California court will decide soon if the 17-year-old computer consultant can legally be decapitated.

Donaldson has an inoperable brain tumor and wants his head frozen in a process called cryonic [illegible] will be able to cure the tumor and give him a new life.

"My doctor tells me I'm done and I don't want to [illegible] stand and continue to live," Donaldson said.

If Donaldson wins in court, he would be anesthetized and his body temperature slowly lowered. Then he would be pumped full of solutions to prevent damage to his cells. His head would be surgically removed, sealed in a vacuum container and maintained at -321 degrees Fahrenheit until technology is available to bring him back to life.

This ghastly photograph was taken minutes after the body was found in a Siberian ice treasure. The dead man was dressed in a silk vest and shirt and wore gloves.

...ssible to bring it back to a normal life without brain damage," said Dr. Kahlbaugh. "He's still in critical condition, however...but he's alive!"

Hypothermia — decreasing the body temperature — has long been used in various medical procedures, especially to preserve organs for transplantation.

Doctors are withholding the man's name while they try to locate any relatives. But from his files found in the lab, this much does know. Prior to his death from heart disease at the age of 21, the man had begun almost experiments in cryonics by London doctor Sir James Dewar.

"He believed he could be frozen and brought back to life," said Dr. Schumann. The family shipped his body to the lab near Dresden on Nov. 24, 1936. He was frozen to a temperature near absolute zero.

"He was dressed in a brown tweed suit an attaché and were hermetically sealed," said local cryonicist Dr. Brigitte Kroeger. "We have repaired the heart blockage that killed him originally with a by-pass operation," said Dr. Kroeger. "He's not out of the woods yet, but the prognosis looks good."

Extension Foundation, a cryonics facility in Riverside, Calif. A lower court turned down Donaldson's bizarre request, so he appealed to the higher court.

"Legally, death occurs when a doctor has given up on a patient," said Alcor's Carlos Needrauer. "Cryonics says that definition is not good enough. We don't believe death has occurred until the structure of the body, or the person, is gone."

As far as Donaldson is concerned, "the whole issue of what death is has gotten all screwed up in the U.S."

As Donaldson's case crawls through the courts, the cancer continues to eat away at his brain.

"I'm in a race against time," he says. "If they wait until I am legally dead before freezing my head my cancer will have destroyed my brain. My personality would be destroyed. There would be no point in being revived."

Donaldson said he signed up for cryonic suspension 15 years ago long before the brain tumor.

"I like living. I want to see the future. I want to be a part of it," he said.

REINCARNATION!

3 incredible stories that prove there is LIFE AFTER DEATH!

Do we live more than one lifespan on earth? Reincarnationists say we do — and throughout the ages amazing stories have surfaced about people who have lived before.

The evidence is often so convincing that there appears to be no other explanation for the strange experiences of those who are reborn. They recognize places they've never seen before. Their bodies bear the signs of a former existence. They know the names of strangers who died centuries ago, or vividly recall events they had no part in in this life.

Where does this mysterious evidence of another existence come from? Is it pure imagination, a freak coincidence, simply the power of suggestion under hypnosis?

Or is it genuine proof that we live and die — and live again?

I DIED 78 YEARS AGO! . . . and was born again in 1948!

Nothing has been the same for 44-year-old Georgia Rudolph since she went on a trip two years ago — and visited the town where she died in 1914!

The Atlanta, Ga., divorcee knew she had lived there before when she recognized every turn in the streets of Marietta, Ohio, and could find her way unaided from one end of town to another.

She could describe buildings that had stood there in the early 1900s when she lived in Marietta as Sandra Jenkins.

"It's not spooky to me anymore, but at first it scared me to death," said Mrs. Rudolph, a nurse. "I didn't believe in reincarnation. But now I'm convinced I lived before."

"Mrs. Rudolph would have had to complete years of historical research to know as much as she does about Marietta in 1914," agreed local historian Tom Prater, who has studied Mrs. Rudolph's case in depth. "She has the vivid recollections of someone who actually lived at that time — it's amazing."

The chubby brunette says the first indications that she had lived before came when she began having flashbacks to her other life at the age of 6. In a recurring dream, she saw herself standing in front of a church in a long white dress. She was about 15 years old. From the church she walked to a cemetery, following a path to her grandmother's grave.

"I've had the dream about 600 times," Mrs. Rudolph said. "Sometimes I dream it once a month and then I dreamed it over and over again. It's very clear."

When she began to draw, she often drew the same picture. On number-of-the recalled it was of a young woman wearing a light green dress of the Victorian era, with high neck and long sleeves. All through her life, she would remember scenes of people and places she'd never seen.

The name "Marietta" was among these. Only when it occurred to her in 1979 that "Marietta" was a place and not a person did Mrs. Rudolph make up her mind to visit the town. That visit changed her life.

"I thought something was seriously wrong with me," she said.

"I went to a psychiatrist who hypnotized me back to my early childhood and that's when Sandra came out. I told the doctor I was Sandra Jean Jenkins and that I was 11 years old. I was born in 1886." In later hypnosis sessions, Mrs. Rudolph found out Sandra had drowned herself at the age of 19 after her boyfriend died, leaving her alone and pregnant.

REINCARNATION!

215-year-old bullet found in baby's chest!

SURGEONS removed a musket ball from the 6-month-old baby boy shown at left.

Doctors treating an infant born with a heart defect were shocked when they operated on the 6-month-old boy on June 2, 1980 — and found a 215-year-old musket ball buried in his chest.

The child, an unidentified American boy who underwent treatment in France, improved dramatically after removal of the old bullet, which has been described as a British cast lead ball fired during the American Revolutionary War era.

"The mother could offer no explanation for this bizarre occurrence and had never suffered any injury during her pregnancy," said Dr. Andre Maynaud, a general surgeon specializing in pediatric care who reported on the bizarre case at an international symposium several months after the surgery.

"Experts have told us the musket ball is genuine.

"We can think of no logical explanation for how a piece of lead statue fashioned over two centuries ago could end up inside the body of a baby at birth. We have only the wildest theories, only the most bizarre conjectures."

Dr. Maynaud and his young patient caused a sensation among reincarnation buffs, who theorized that a soldier killed fighting in the American Revolution might have been reborn as the American boy.

The doctor was later contacted by two psychics who identified the baby as reincarnated soldier Samuel Power, a 24-year-old Delaware farmer who was engaged to be married when he was shot in the chest in 1778, he said.

Power survived for several months after his injury, but eventually died of complications from the wound. "The baby was born underweight and in difficulty," Dr. Maynaud told a conference in Brussels, Belgium.

"We believed that he suffered from heart abnormalities that caused him to suffer breathing and pulse irregularities.

"We stabilized him and waited as long as possible to do surgery so that the child could build up weight for the operation.

"At six months we went in to correct the deformities and found no abnormalities.

"The problem was caused by a half-inch ball of metal lodged near the aorta."

Dr. Maynaud said the baby did very well after surgery and developed completely normally.

At the parents' request, no more information was released about the child or his background.

PSYCHICS say the baby boy is a reincarnated Revolutionary War soldier.

THIS MAN DROWNED IN 1874 & HAS A DEATH CERTIFICATE TO PROVE IT!

In an earlier life, Ray Bryant was an Englishman named Reuben Stafford who drowned in the Thames River in 1874 — and he has a death certificate to prove it!

His vivid recollection of a past life is said by experts to be the most astonishing and best documented case of hypnotic regression ever to be reported.

While in a deep trance, the 68 year old British journalist has revealed gory memories of serving as a British soldier in the Crimean War and how he felt when he killed a Russian infantryman in hand-to-hand combat.

Under deep hypnosis, he has journeyed into the misty past to relive the wretched despair that drove him to leap from London's Millwall docks into the swift and lurbid waters of the Thames on a cold and drizzly night in April 1874.

Speaking as Reuben, Ray recalled how he joined the 47th Lancashire Regiment of Foot in 1844 at the age of 22.

By 1854, he was made a sergeant and sent to the Crimean front to fight in two major battles.

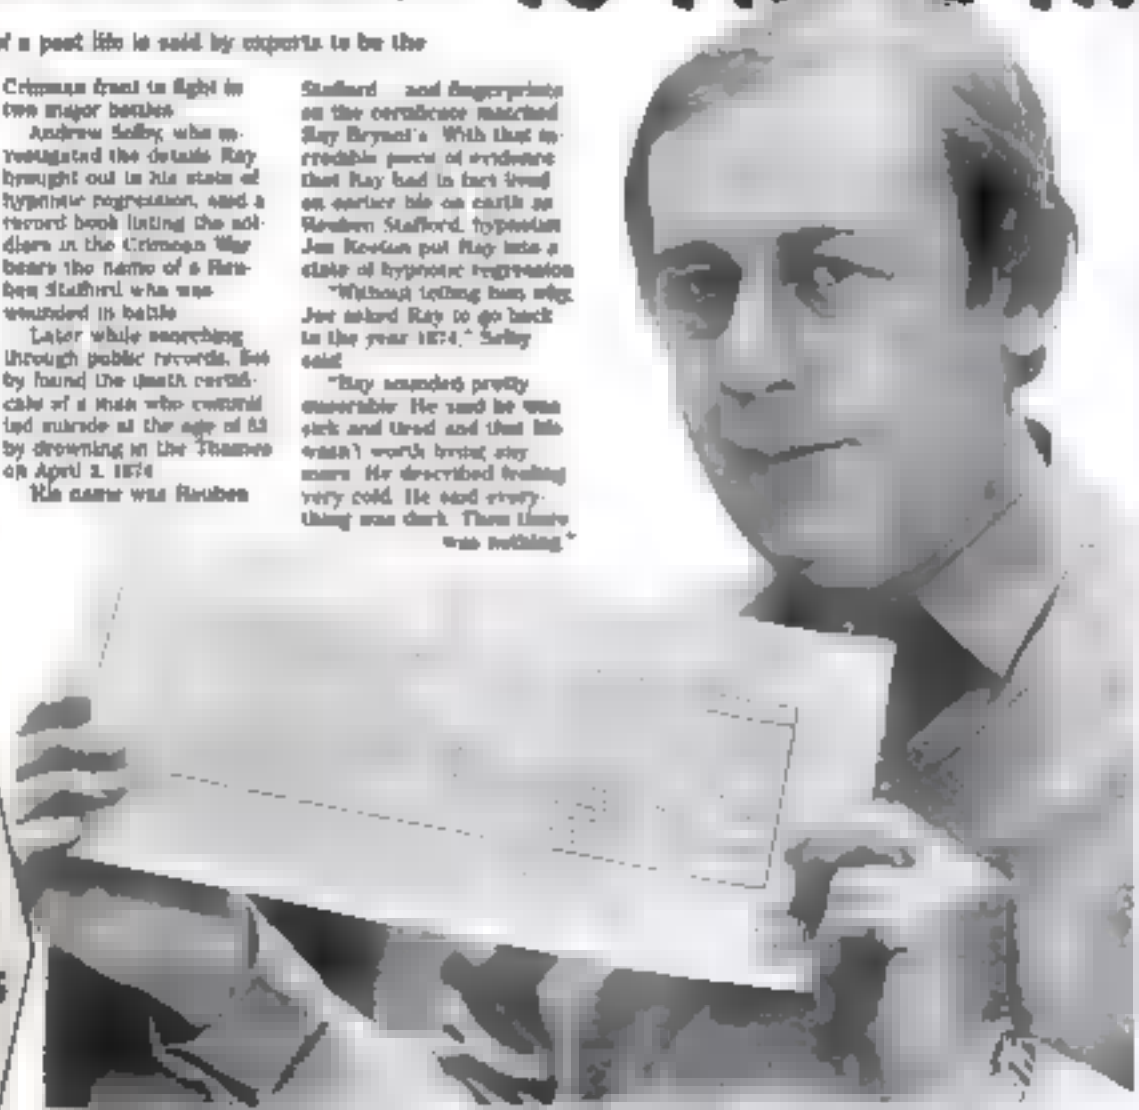
Andrew Solley, who investigated the details Ray brought out in his state of hypnotic regression, used a record book listing the soldiers in the Crimean War bears the name of a Reuben Stafford who was wounded in battle.

Later while searching through public records, he by found the death certificate of a man who committed suicide at the age of 53 by drowning in the Thames on April 2, 1874.

His name was Reuben Stafford — and fingerprints on the certificate matched Ray Bryant's. With that incredible piece of evidence that Ray had in fact lived an earlier life on earth as Reuben Stafford, hypnotist Jan Keelan put Ray into a state of hypnotic regression.

"Without telling him why, Jan asked Ray to go back to the year 1874," Solley said.

"Ray sounded pretty miserable. He said he was sick and tired and that life wasn't worth living any more. He described feeling very cold. He said everything was dark. There there was nothing."



He fought in the Crimean War 138 years ago — and was reincarnated in 1939!

Mexican valley is secret

So many spaceships fly over Mexico's Santiago Valley that the peasants who live there don't even bother to look up anymore, a leading expert reports.

Dr. Gerd Heinen has worked and studied in the valley for the past two years and he says the proof is irrefutable — as many as 500 UFOs of varying shapes and sizes hover over the mysterious valley each year.

Just what attracts the ships isn't clear. They has space aliens have a secret base hidden somewhere in the area.

Others believe the site is being used as a radioactive-waste dump because of unusually high radiation levels in the air.

"We know that the Santiago Valley is frequented by starships — the question is why," Dr. Heinen told news reporters at a Linz, Austria, conference.

"I'm not one of those researchers who thinks that aliare such a good idea," he continued.

"If these creatures have business here, I think it's imperative for us to find out what it is."

Although the fact hasn't been widely publicized, no less than 14 countries are monitoring the situation in the Santiago Valley around the clock and have been for years, said Dr. Heinen.

"They know what's going on down there," he added. "But they're not going to tell

ALIENS LIVE AMONG US!

Incredible new camera makes them stand out in a crowd!

A series of startling new photos provides shocking evidence that space aliens are living and working among us!

Researchers using an amazing new "radiation" camera designed for outer space photography have photographed at least 36 individuals they believe are extraterrestrials. The photos were taken in a major European city but they suspect aliens have infiltrated human populations worldwide including the U.S.

Dr. Kornheim

"The individuals show up in photos of crowds very clearly," explained Dr. Hugo Kornheim, a Geneva, Switzerland, physicist who helped develop the new camera. "Their heads are surrounded by a faint green halo which we believe is caused by radiation coming out from their brains.

"The extraordinary thing is that the glowing individuals are completely untraceable. We can locate almost any human shown in our photos, but when we try to track down one of these halo people we run into a dead end every time."

Dr. Kornheim and a colleague, Dr. Max Vandenhauter, discovered the alien-spotting capability of their camera by accident. The sophisticated apparatus was designed to pick up space satellites and debris by responding to minute traces of radiation given off by the man-made objects.

On a trip from Geneva to Oslo, Dr. Vandenhauter fired off a number of test shots at an airport after the camera was slightly damaged in transit. The camera worked fine — well enough to record startling images of "halo people" mingled with the airport crowds.

"At first we had no idea why these green auras were visible around certain individuals in the picture," Dr. Kornheim said.

"In cooperation with local police, we attempted to find them to see if they had been exposed to radiation in their work or homes.

"But after months of trying to trace these individuals we found that they've completely vanished. What's more, we cannot find any signs that they existed.

"There is no evidence the space aliens cause us any harm, but it's frightening anyway. They are hiding out among us and we have no idea what they're up to," said Dr. Kornheim.

causing a panic. It's a very delicate situation because nobody wants a confrontation with any of these extraterrestrials."

Oddly enough, the very people who would appear to be directly jeopardized by the starships and space aliens say there is nothing to fear.

Peasant Carlos Rasilla, 44, spoke for most of the townspeople when he said: "The starships come and go and never bother us. I'm not afraid. The only thing that bothers me is the whistling and whooshing noises they make when they fly overhead."

Added Dr. Nelson: "For years there have been reports that extraterrestrials had taken up residence with the peasants and helped them to raise giant disease-resistant crops. The peasants do grow such crops. But I found no evidence that ex-

STARSHIP BEAMS UP AN ENTIRE TOWN!

Police officers responding to an emergency call watched in stunned horror as a sausage-shaped UFO sucked an entire town off the face of the Earth in one of the most astonishing close encounters ever!

The drama began when three officers assigned to the provincial police department in Chichiang, China, were alerted to "impending disaster" in the nearby village of Wufeng.

They arrived to investigate just as the enormous black starship hit the town with three beams of orange light — causing it to vanish before their eyes.

"There was nothing left but bare rock and scorched soil," Officer Su Pian told the Kweichow People's Press in a report on the wild disaster.

"Where there had been 752 people there was nobody. The site where the village stood was stripped of every building and every living thing."

Chinese newspapers said police in Chichiang received an emergency call demanding immediate assistance from the Revolutionary Committee of Wufeng, the local government body that runs the small town, around 19 p.m. on September 1.

"The official said an enormous black cylinder had descended from the sky and was hovering over the village," recalled a dispatcher. "He was very frightened."

The dispatcher sent three officers — Su Pian and two subordinates — to the village. They made the 20-mile drive to Wufeng in less than a half hour, arriving at 19:30 p.m. Almost immediately [illegible] where once 752 people lived, there is now only wrecked earth.

UFO hit the village with beams of orange light. They watched, stunned, as the glow increased in intensity before it gradually faded — leaving an utter black nothingness behind.

The Chinese government acknowledged that Wufeng was missing but declined further comment. Subsequent investigations by independent UFO researchers have yet to yield a clue as to why the town was taken — or where it might

These dramatic photos recorded the historic capture of a space alien by federal agents. The creature is shown as it was being hustled into a CIA safe house in Washington.

AGENTS CAPTURE SPACE ALIEN ALIVE!

AMERICAN agents captured a space alien at a UFO landing site in western Virginia on Sept. 29, 1990 proving once and for all that extraterrestrials do exist - and have a keen interest in the affairs of mankind and planet Earth!

Dramatic photos of the creature being hustled into a CIA safe house before it was moved to a secret location in the nation's capital showed it to be tall and stocky with a large, bulb-shaped head.

Sources further revealed that the alien spoke English both forward and backward. And for a time it cooperated fully with agents who made it plainly clear to find out its reasons for coming to Earth as well as the technology that got it here.

"This is the moment we've been waiting for since the U.S. government first began investigating UFOs in the 1940s," the FBI investigator who got the pictures and broke the story, told The Weekly World News at the time of the creature's capture.

"The government has lied to us before about UFOs and space aliens but this time there will be no lies," he continued. "This time we've got photographic proof that the creature is in custody."

CIA spokesmen denied the UFO agent's allegations and actually threatened to "neutralize" a NEWS correspondent who pressed for details.

But the researcher himself - who requested anonymity to avoid CIA reprisals - claimed to have no less than 12 highly placed intelligence sources who can back up his story.

He went on to say: "On the morning of September 29 I got a tip that agents had captured the alien while investigating a UFO landing in western Virginia's mountains the night before.

"My source told me that the craft had crash-landed in the time agents arrived. But a search of the area produced a single extraterrestrial who was hiding in a clump of bushes some 75 yards from the landing site. The source also told me that the alien would be taken to a safe house for questioning later that day.

RUSSIAN ARMY COMMANDEERED A UFO IN 1989!

...AND THEY STILL HAVE IT!

Human scientists got their first look at UFO technology when the Russian military commandeered a saucer-shaped starship in the spring of 1989 and flew it to a military base for study!

Edited by Jack Alexander and Richard Lang

News of the incident didn't reach the West until the summer of 1991. But smuggled documents and photographs showed the spacecraft to be in excellent condition and obviously capable of flight as it hovered silently in a Russian hangar.

Al the time, German astrophysicist Heinrich Wolf said the Russians "have not only won the space race, they've got the most formidable weapon the world has ever seen."

He went on to say that they were "prepared to spend billions" on their study of the starship ... but the collapse of the Soviet Union a year later derailed the research effort, possibly forever.

According to the smuggled documents, a Russian army unit stumbled on the UFO and its crew at a landing site in western Siberia. Reports were sketchy. But the soldiers apparently captured several extraterrestrials at gunpoint and then jostled the UFO to a military base near Moscow themselves.

Nobody knows what happened to the crew ... and the fate of the UFO is in question as well. It was once rumored that the Russian military traded the spaceship to the United States for use in the Gulf War, but that has never been confirmed.

Wolf himself said he lost touch with his sources when the Russian government fell into disarray.

U.S. agents capture space alien — ALIVE!

When the agents and the extraterrestrial arrived, I was hiding in an alley across the street with my cameras and nine rolls of film.

"The pictures I got show that the alien was handcuffed. And when the agents escorted him out of the safe house 15 minutes later, one of them had his coat off and in the photos you can see a gun on his belt.

"I wanted to follow them in my car but one of the agents spotted me and pointed at me. I was afraid they would shoot me, so I ran to my car and got the hell out of there. I had to protect the film."

Sources later told him that the alien was moved at least six times as agents tried to keep its capture secret but just three weeks later the creature kicked down the door to a holding cell, "incapacitated" 11 guards and escaped, prompting the UFO researcher to say:

"This is a tragedy of the first magnitude. It's now out on the streets, a threat to everyone."

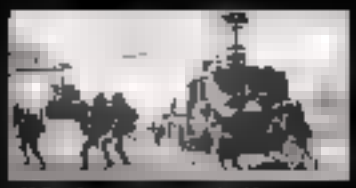
WORLD'S BATTLEFIELDS



U.S. chopper rescue in Nha Trang, Vietnam.

In this great nation's relatively brief history, millions of gallant American fighting men have given their lives in the defense of freedom. The ghosts of many of those who died still haunt the battlefields where they fell. From Gettysburg, Pa., to Chateau-Thierry, France, veterans have told of their eerie encounters with these American soldiers who still patrol the hallowed soil they gave their lives to defend.

Here then are some of these eyewitness accounts. Some you may find chilling. But don't be surprised if you find one or two that are more than a bit heartwarming.

Thousands of startling encounters confirmed by military experts

For more than a century, mystery has shrouded the Little Big Horn — that winding river in Montana where George Armstrong Custer fought his infamous "Last Stand." The surrounding battlefield is haunted by the phantoms of slaughtered cavalrymen and Sioux warriors — and the legendary Colonel himself.

Edited by DICK DOUGHERTY

"I have seen the ghosts of Indian warriors on the battlefield with my own eyes," declared Mardell Plainfeather, a guide at the Custer National Monument at Montana.

"They are the restless spirits from that long ago day when hundreds of men

Indians and soldiers

went to their death in glorious battle."

Miss Plainfeather is a full blooded Crow whose ancestors fought in the famed massacre at Little Big Horn in 1876.

Noted historian Charles Kuhlman, who did extensive research at the battle site, said he has actually talked with the colorful Colonel himself.

"I have been in touch with Colonel Custer's spirit up on the ridge where he fell in battle," Kuhlman once told fellow researcher Joe Von Nardy. "It was Custer There is no doubt."

Korea — American GIs who guarded the 38th Parallel, the imaginary line separating North and South Korea, talk openly about hearing the ghostly marching song of the Punchbowl Platoon. The Punchbowl was the battlefield where U.S. and United Nations troops held off the advance of Chinese Communists trying to cross the Parallel in 1951.

"Yeah," I heard those guys all sporting in each other at night," recounted a private from Kansas. "I always had the impression they were out there in their foxholes waiting for an attack. I remember hearing one guy call out for a smoke. Hey Sarge, You got an extra cigaret?" he yelled. The answer he got was finger about smoking, sonny. You light a match and the Chinks will be on us like flies on a preach."

"We all believe the whole came from the Punchbowl Platoon. I have three guys who swear they even saw Ded ghosts scurrying from foxhole to foxhole."

Normandy — Through the years, there have been those who swear they have seen the ghost of a soldier roaming the beaches of Normandy, where the Allied invasion launched the liberation of Nazi occupied France.

"I have seen that pitiful soul many times," declared 81 year old

"He seems to be searching for his comrades," Jubertal explained. "He is covered with grime and his uniform is stained with blood."

A caretaker at the nearby cemetery at St. Laurent, where many than 9,000 American servicemen lay buried, said he has seen the soldier many times since that [illegible] on June 6 the heaviest nary of the Allies' D-Day invasion. "He kneels and shouts his tears at every grave," caretaker Gerard Pretet revealed.

The Arcanae — Aging Nicole Angebut lives in the wooded district of France where so many American daughters lost their lives in World War I. She and her family have been visited by the restless ghosts of those dead soldiers so often they have come to look on them as old friends.

"The spirits of many of those fine young boys are still here in the woods," Nicole explained. "We hear them shouting and singing their old war ditties and we see them cleaning their weapons, always making ready for battle.

"Sometimes in the family were them at least once a month. It's as though the soldier boys breathe their home away from home.

"At first, we were terrified. But we have come to enjoy their visits. They died fighting France from Germany. They are our cherished friends."

Chancellorsville, Va. — Those who delve into the realm of the unknown have documented many astonishing cases of ghostly activity on the battlefields of the American Civil War, where visitors have reported eerie encounters with the spirits of dead Union and Confederate soldiers.

The most dramatic and best documented cases on record involve the blood-soaked killing field at Gettysburg, Pa., where a crucial battle was fought in July 1863. But there are even more reported ghostly sightings on the battlefields of Chancellorsville, where Gen. Robert E. Lee scored his last major victory.

Visitors to Gettysburg have returned with hair-raising accounts of weird conversations with the spirits of fallen soldiers. Investigators armed with ultra-sensitive listening devices recently recorded moans that might only have come from the nearly 8,000 men and boys killed in that bloody summer.

The most restless Civil War spirit is that of Stonewall Jackson, often seen wandering the wilderness surrounding Chancellorsville. Under the command of Gen. Lee, Jackson was walking his men in a successful rout of Union troops when he was mortally wounded — by one of his own men!

Her, Vietnam — In the years since Advent Gear soldiers lost in the grey distrust fought battles in Vietnam, many peasants have reported seeing a GI patrol hacking its way through the dense jungle surrounding Hue.

And in a small village near Phuoc Vit, in one of the deadliest skirmishes of the 10-year conflict, the spectre of a bloody American soldier is seen years after his bullet-riddled corpse was found in a roadside ditch. Peasants say they see the soldier again and again on moonless nights. They believe he is on an eternal search for a lost comrade.

"He comes on rainy nights, calling out the name 'Ernie' over and over as he roams the countryside," a villager told a Japanese newspaper crew. "We sent his body home, but his spirit remains with us to this day. At first, we were afraid. But now we understand that he must carry on his search. We can only pray for him."

Michigan woman has 9-inch tongue

Mary Beth Lacker has the world's longest tongue, a 9-inch monster that literally dangles to her chest — and flaps in the wind!

"Embarrassed? Me? Why should I be embarrassed?" asked the 33-year-old secretary from Detroit. "The Good Lord gave me this tongue and if it's good enough for Him, it's good enough for me.

"Now don't get me wrong. Having a tongue like this isn't the greatest thing in the world and sometimes it can be downright unwieldy. It's just that I believe in taking my life in stride and doing the best I can with the mind and body I was born with. I was just born with an extremely long tongue, that's all."

As incredible as it might sound, Mary Beth didn't realize she had the world's longest tongue until Miami resident Hugh Stone — and his 8-inch wonder — made international headlines last July.

"My tongue seems to bother other people a lot more than it bothers me," the brave lady said. "Talking is a little difficult and certain foods can be tricky.

"But at first I can look at myself in the mirror and say, 'You're one of a kind, Mary Beth. You're unique.' Remembering that I'm special helps me to shrug it off wherever strangers stare and point or make wisecracks.

WORLD'S BIGGEST BABY

4-year-old weighs 235 pounds!

Scale-jangling Jin Li is the world's tubbiest toddler, a chubby-cheeked chowhound who wolfs down so much chicken, fish and noodles that he's swelled to a whopping 235 pounds — at the tender age of 4!

He's getting fatter everyday!

"Our poor baby eats everything in sight and then begs for more," his astonished mom Mei told reporters in the Sichuan, China

"Already he weighs more than his father and he's growing bigger every day. We can't even keep him in clothes because he busts right out of them."

"But if we don't feed him enough he cries and we think he's not getting anything he can find bugs, mud, anything."

Dumbfounded doctors don't have the slightest idea why the tub of lard-like junior puts on such fast, but they want him on a crash diet — before it's too late.

"It's obviously not healthy for a child of 4 to be eating and growing like this," said puzzled pediatrician Dr. Cheung Hok Hung. "Specialists all over China have examined this baby and everyone is stumped. There must be a reason for his massive appetite, but it remains a mystery."

Jumbo Jin weighed in at 22 pounds, 4 ounces when he was born, and after a check of hospitals around the world it was determined he was the biggest baby ever.

THIS WOMAN IS 95 YEARS OLD!

Hana Haron is 85 years old, but she looks 23 — and she's getting younger looking every day!

Aging expert Dr. Luciano Grazo has been studying Hana for the past two years but says he still doesn't know why she looks like a happy-go-lucky college girl.

"This woman is truly one of a kind," Dr. Grazo told a medical conference in Genoa, Italy. "Her birth certificate proves she was born on Oct. 20, 1898, but she looks 70 years younger than she is — without the benefit of plastic surgery."

. . . and she's getting younger every day!

Dr. Grazo began conducting tests on Hana after seeing her picture in a Genoa newspaper with her husband Guido and their two children, six grandchildren, 13 great grandchildren and 14 great great grandchildren.

"Hana looks even younger and more vibrant than her great grandkids who are all in their late 20s and 30s. The dumb [expletive] doctor told his colleagues. 'All the tests we've performed on her indicate she's as healthy as a teenage girl — and in fact, she's even more vibrant now than she was back in the 1960s.'"

Dr. Grazo says he'll continue his testing on her in an effort to find something that could help others live longer, healthier lives.

But the sharply dressed great-great-granny says she'll enjoy her good fortune and not worry about the reason.

"I eat what I like and I smoke and drink more than I should," she confessed. "The only thing that bothers me is the birth control pills.

"I don't like them but I don't take any chances. It would be stupid for a woman my age to get pregnant again."

She's a human water balloon!

Potbellied belle Ingrid Smith has packed [illegible] pounds of flab on [illegible] stocky [illegible] in a single year — by gulping down an incredi[illegible] 48 pints of water a day!

"I'm always thirsty, so I have to [illegible] all the time," enormous Ingrid, 22, told reporters in Cannock, England. "But no matter how much water I drink, it doesn't seem to satisfy me. All it does is make me fatter and more miserable."

Dumbfounded doctors admit they don't know what turned the pixie miss into a human sponge or why her nonstop swilling caused her to balloon from 154 pounds to a whopping 335 pounds.

"We've taken her to specialists everywhere and they're just as baffled as we are," said her mystified mom Mary.

And her frantic dad Geoff says the family is terrified that Ingrid is literally drinking herself to death.

"Our daughter is starting to lose a bloody fight to those of our eyes until there is nothing we can do about it," said the puzzled pop. "She's so big now she can barely move around, and I don't know how much longer all this can go on. It's destroying her ... and it's tearing her mother and me apart."

Amplo Ingrid was a very normal young woman till about a year ago, her mom says.

Then the unlucky lass got hooked on tap water ... and her life hasn't been the same since.

"My mouth started feeling dry all the time and I developed a real craving I couldn't control," overwhelmed Ingrid told reporters. "I still can't control it. It seems I have a water glass in my hands round the clock.

"And I don't want to go out anywhere where I can't get my hands on a glass of water. It's really dreadful."

But Ingrid's devoted dad says they'll shuttle the dumpy damsel from one doctor to another till they find one who can help her kick the tap water habit.

"We didn't want our daughter to be the only woman on in history who ever drank herself to death on water," he said.

Amazing dog girl can talk with animals

Amazing little Mikla Biro is a real-life dog girl, a fur-covered kid who has an I.Q. of 200 and can actually talk with animals!

The fun loving 5-year-old discovered recently by doctors in Gizi, Hungary, is believed to be the world's first true, living link between humans and exotic studies as excited experts compete to unlock the mysteries she poses for mankind.

"As far as we know, no one has ever seen a child with these characteristics," biologist Sandor Haugo said. "It's a veritable goldmine of information."

Mikla is totally covered in the human world, but in the same way she is a natural companion of the animals.

"She can understand what animals are saying when they yelp, whine bark or make other sounds. She can answer them in their own language, and it's apparent there is total communication ly bright, but she is not [illegible] pretty.

"We have tested her intelligence and she has an I.Q. of at least 200," Dr. Haugo mama said. "But her most amazing feature is her ability to understand animals. We believe she acquired this ability while confined to her parents' small farm with no one but the animals to play with."

FACE ON MARS SIGNALS TO EARTH

RADIO signals from Mars, right, made headlines in The New York Times during the 1920s.

N.Y. TIMES REPORTED BIZARRE COMMUNICATIONS

Were inhabitants of Mars communicating with American scientists in the 1920s? The answer, shockingly, is yes — and the proof is in a public library for everyone to see!

Back in 1924, Scientific American magazine told The New York Times clearly and that researchers were receiving radio signals from Mars between 1920 and 1924.

Transmissions received at listening posts around the world showed the messages to be composed of a mysterious code-like series of dots and dashes.

And even more astonishing, when the dots and dashes were transferred to photographic film, they took the form of the same crude stone face Armstrong's Viking probe photographed on the surface of Mars in 1976.

"I'm not the least bit surprised that scientists were receiving such messages in the 1920s," said Dr. Ludia Pasche, the Swiss astronomer. "I am firmly convinced that the stone face, the so-called Martian sphinx, houses radio and television transmitters.

"It is my contention that a Martian civilization has been transmitting messages to Earth and beyond for half a million years, which Martian face." Dr. Pasche's theories made international headlines when he announced that American and Russian scientists have been monitoring television transmissions from Mars for years.

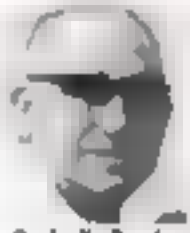
He also claimed to have proof that ancient astronauts from outer space visited Earth 10,000 years ago and left behind a huge pyramid in Egypt.

Dr. Pasche's theories have been greeted with skepticism by most of the scientific community.

That's in spite of the fact that William Friedman, the U.S. expert who deciphered Japanese military codes during World War II, worked day and night to figure them out.

As reported in the March 30, 1920 edition of Scientific American, the first expert to receive and recognize the Martian message was Guglielmo Marconi, the Italian physicist who invented the radio. The messages were later recorded and studied by American scientists, including the famed Amherst astronomy professor, Dr. David Todd, and C. Francis Jenkins, the Washington-based inventor of the device that transmitted the first television picture.



Dr. Ludia Pasche

Dr. Todd's request and with President Calvin Coolidge's blessing, radio stations around the world actually interrupted programming and maintained silence every hour on the hour between August 23 and 28 to avoid interfering with the signal.

Of the crude stone face that showed up on film after the transmissions were received, Jenkins told The Times: "It's a freak which we can't explain."

"But now," said Dr. Pasche, "we can. It is obvious that the face on film is a representation of the Martian sphinx.

"The challenge before us now is to send men to the source of the transmissions."

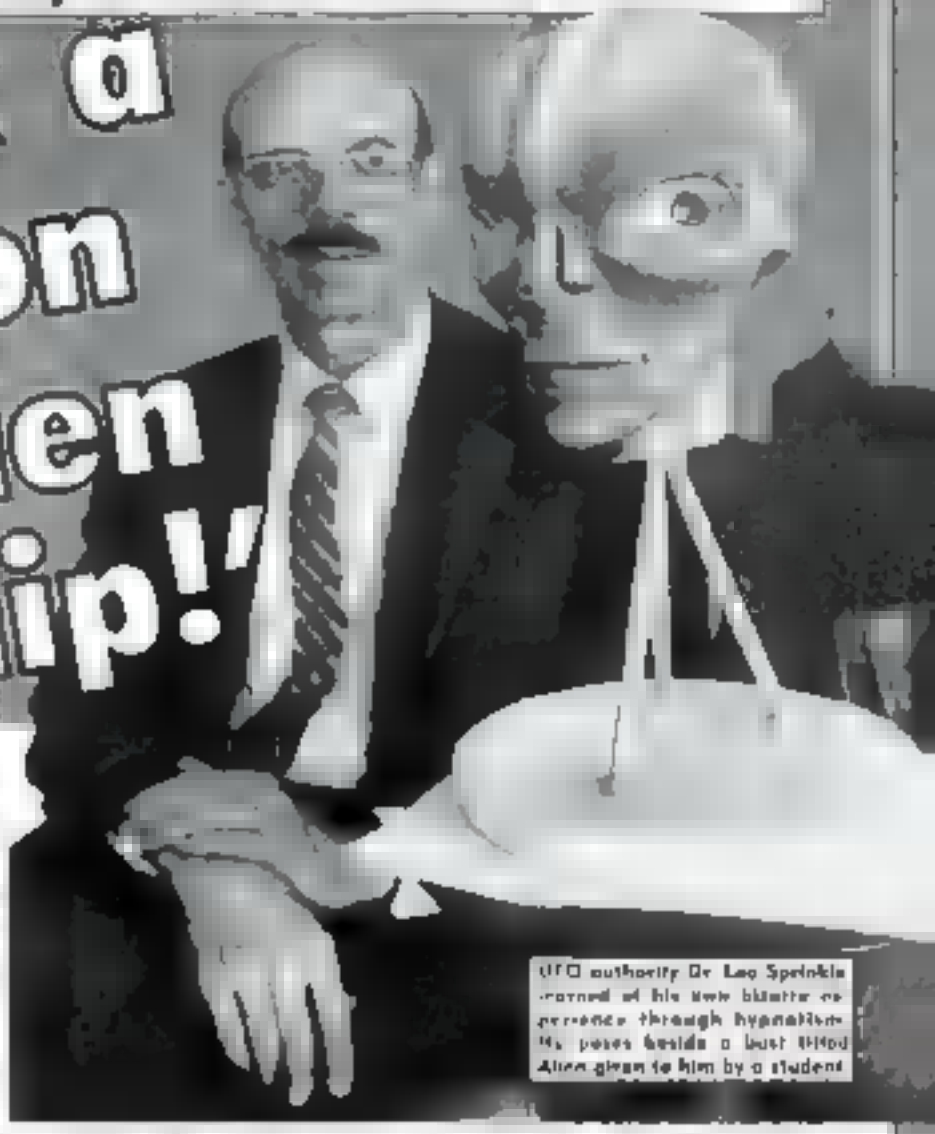
America's leading UFO expert reveals for the first time . . .

"I took a ride on an alien starship!"



UFO authority Dr Leo Sprinkle reenacts his new ability to persuade through hypnotism. He poses beside a bust titled Alien given to him by a student World famous UFO specialist Leo Sprinkle, who has investigated hundreds of close encounters, startled his colleagues when he revealed his own amazing childhood voyage beyond the stars.

[redacted] was not aware of his own bizarre UFO experience until he went through a hypnosis session in 1965.

"Even today when I close my eyes the fantastic sight of those stars rushing toward me it gives me a shiver," he said.

"I think, Wow! I'd like to see that again."

Some of the subjects Sprinkle has regressed through hypnosis have recalled their astonishing meetings with "well meaning" aliens visiting on a peaceful mission of our planet.

But [redacted] was terrified of being used as helpless guinea pigs in terrifying medical probes.

Sprinkle said he is sure all the aliens want are the best ways of [redacted] to ensure the survival of generations to come.

"Not only are the aliens sizing us up physically, but they're also assessing us psychologically. Trying to determine what [redacted] to help us advance [redacted] edge," he said.

"It's still a great mystery, though.

"We don't have the answers. And, quite often, we don't even know the questions to ask.

He relives his astonishing journey under hypnosis!

"I was aboard a space vehicle of some kind looking out a large window at the stars rushing by. A tall man — at least I believe it was a man — was standing beside me, his hand resting on my shoulder.

"He said to me, 'Tate, learn to read and write well. Then, when you become a adult you can help people learn about their purpose in life.'"

Tragically, Dr Sprinkle — who has hypnotised nearly 200 people to help them recollect their extra-terrestrial encounters — has been unable to help himself.

WOMAN

Helen Hix established herself as the world's toughest — or luckiest — woman when she survived three mind-frying jolts in the electric chair!

A dramatic photograph of the president clearly shows the 31-year old woman writhing in agony as a prison executioner hit her with 2,000 volts.

Determined officials tried twice more to kill Miss Hix but she still wouldn't die.

And when all was said and done, authorities felt they had no choice but to forget the cruel Miss Hix was convicted of — and set her free.

"There sit her with everything they had and still couldn't kill her," said Malcolm Stilwell, a journalist who posed as a priest and smuggled a camera into the hellish Singapore jail so he could document the incident on film.

"Prison officials were beside themselves and after a brief discussion, they walked her to the prison infirmary.

Her head wounds and legs were badly burned and she obviously suffered some brain and nerve damage because her speech was slurred and she was trembling all over.

"The authorities simply refuse to discuss it. But sources tell me that officials considered the woman's survival to be an 'act of God' and secretly released her."

The chances of Stilwell getting inside the Singapore prison to take pictures — much less photograph the first electric chair survivor in history — are almost beyond comprehen

"I took a personal interest in the Ho case during her trial for drug smuggling because I was convinced she had been framed," Stinson said.

"She received a 58-year sentence but I learned that she had been taken to one of Singapore's notorious 'secret prisons' where illegal executions are carried out routinely. Even if I couldn't save Miss Ho, I wanted to [illegible] what had been going on in these secret prisons.

"As it turned out she didn't [illegible] get [illegible] her release and story. It couldn't have turned out better for either of us," said Stinson.

Singapore officials angrily deny the reporter's allegations and say that illegal executions "have not and will never take place."

But the photograph on the opposite page tells another story.

DR. Floriano Passos delivered Irislides' baby. She outweighed her mom by a mere 34 pounds, he said.

THE WORLD'S SKINNIEST WOMAN HAS A BABY!

Walking skeleton Irislides Santos Alves weighs only 37 pounds — but, incredibly, she succeeded in getting pregnant and giving birth to a healthy baby boy!

Doctors say they cannot explain how the 31-year-old Brazilian waif-to-be completed a normal pregnancy, but pronounced both mother and son in excellent shape.

"Normally a woman this undernourished cannot even get pregnant, let alone produce a viable offspring," said Dr. Floriano Passos, the physician who treated Irislides during her pregnancy.

"But Irislides is an exceptional patient who sacrificed a great deal for her baby. She ate more than she normally does throughout the pregnancy and in the final months she gave up her usual exercise routine and forced herself to rest so that she burned less calories."

Irislides was dubbed the "Human Toothpick" when she was first discovered in 1974 living in a small Brazilian village. She weighed just 55 pounds at the time — even though her weight increased shortly after her marriage in October 1980. It plummeted again to 37 pounds in the first months of her pregnancy.

Her survival in such a skin-and-bones state has baffled doctors, but they can find nothing physically wrong with her.

During the course of her pregnancy, Irislides was frequently nauseous and lost four pounds. She tried to maintain her strength by eating fruits, leveling up her normal diet by climbing down as many slices of bread and butter as she could each day and swallowing huge quantities of ice cream and vitamin pills.

But despite her best efforts, Dr. Passos worried about her child and when the fetus failed to gain weight for two consecutive five weeks they decided to deliver the baby by cesarean section. Her son was born in perfect condition, weighing in at 3 pounds, 2 ounces.

But the childbirth took a toll on Irislides, who lost another five pounds following surgery. She lingered in the hospital for four weeks after the birth, hooked to intravenous feeding devices and eating a special high-calorie liquid diet.

THE MYSTERY OF HUMAN SPONTANEOUS COMBUSTION!

Imagine, if you dare, the horror of seeing someone suddenly burst into flames right before your eyes!

The hellish echo of the victim's pitiful screams... the ghastly sight of the twisting, writhing body and the acrid, overpowering stench of burning flesh would haunt your dreams for the rest of your days.

The unholy phenomenon is known as human spontaneous combustion.

There are skeptics who say the human body simply isn't capable of erupting in flames for no apparent reason. It can't happen, they argue. It's impossible.

Well, here are three compelling accounts of human spontaneous combustion which clearly show that, sometimes, strange and unseen powers are at work.

And when they are -- the impossible DOES happen!

Girl bursts into flames in the shower!

Pretty college coed Marilee Mars mysteriously burst into flames and burned to a crisp — while taking a shower after a gym class!

The cause of death was officially listed as "incineration resulting from spontaneous combustion," but files concerning the 1969 tragedy remain open to researchers trying to unravel the mysterious force that turns humans into fiery torches without warning.

"From what I have been told, Miss Mars' body began to smoke just before it suddenly erupted in flames even though she was standing under a heavy stream of water in the shower," said French paranormal expert Dr. Henri Clement, who conducted an in-depth investigation into the university student's death.

"There was no source of heat or fire visible to her teachers and classmates. She obviously started to burn spontaneously from the inside out."

Police Sgt. Andre Blanchard agreed with Dr. Clement's conclusion, saying his investigation failed to uncover any apparent cause for the furious blaze that killed the 22-year-old senior at St. Mary's College near Paris.

A witness to the ghastly death, 20-year-old Catherine Lafleur, said Miss Mars appeared to be normal and happy up until the moment she began to burn.

"She was laughing and joking around like she always did, when something caused her to grimace," Miss Lafleur told police.

"The shower water was cold, but she complained of being hot. After that, the smoke started pouring out of her ears and her nose and mouth. Then she burst into flames and started screaming."

Though some 35 students and teachers heard the coed's cries of agony, no one could get close enough to help her. The flames roared for about 10 minutes, then slowly died out. All that remained of what had been a beautiful, vivacious and fun-loving girl was a small mound of blackened ash.

"There are about 30 cases of human spontaneous combustion a year," said Dr. Clement. "But no one has been able to say what causes them."

COED Marilee Mars started to burn spontaneously from the inside out.

Sunbather bursts into flames on the beach!

BYSTANDERS tried to smother the flames with sand but their efforts were unsuccessful.

A 28-year-old woman exploded into flames and was reduced to a pile of ashes while sunbathing on a beach in Rio de Janeiro!

The tragic drama unfolded around noon at a crowded beach at Guanabara Bay on the Brazilian coast.

Vacationing secretary Carmen de Castro was sunning on the beach when wispy gray smoke suddenly began to curl from her pale, bare abdomen. She struggled to her feet and then her entire body burst into flames.

She screamed "Help! I'm burning up! Somebody help me! Please!"

She let out a piercing scream and toppled over. When the flames at last died out, all that remained was a pile of smoldering ashes.

Police Chief Carmelo Anastasio said bystanders made a desperate effort to extinguish the flames with beach sand.

"It was a hot cause from the start," Anastasio said.

The fire eventually burned itself out, but the heat was so intense that only a few tiny bits of bone and teeth were recovered.

"There was no sign of foul play and we haven't a clue how the fire started.

"The temperature that day was about 90 degrees — hot, but not nearly hot enough to start a fire."

At the time, famed paranormal research Dr. Mario Vincelo concluded that Carmen was another victim of human spontaneous combustion and that determination is officially listed as the cause of death in the police file on the case.

"I certainly don't want to understate the tragedy of this young woman's horrible death, but the descriptions of what happened to her provide important clues to solving the mystery of human spontaneous combustion once and for all."

PRETTY Carmen de Castro died a fiery death on a sunny beach in Brazil.

Kissing couple bursts into flames at a shopping mall!

In an equally eerie case of human spontaneous combustion, young lovers Christian Hays and Patrice Massani caught fire and burned to ash — while kissing in a crowded mall!

"Their lips touched and within seconds there was nothing but the stench of seared flesh to indicate they had been standing there in the first place," paranormal researcher Marc Gillon told newsmen after investigating the tragedy in Brussels, Belgium.

"As with all genuine cases of human spontaneous combustion, these people were nowhere near a source of heat before they burst into flames," added Gillon.

"The fire that consumed them came from within. It burned them from the inside out."

Witnesses said that Miss Massani, 24, and Hays, 27, began to smoke as soon as they paused to embrace. When their lips met, fire shot from their backs and leapt 15 feet into the air. Just 30 seconds later, the couple had been reduced to a shovelful of ash on the scorched tile floor.

9-year-old's bizarre disappearance baffles playmates!

GIRL VANISHES INTO THIN AIR!

WORLD NEWS UNSOLVED MYSTERIES

In one of the most baffling disappearances ever recorded, a 9-year-old girl who darted into a cow pasture to retrieve a soccer ball vanished into thin air — while her mother and playmates watched.

"She vanished like a puff of smoke," said Catherine Renet, the child's 33-year-old mom.

And in spite of an exhaustive search by hundreds of police officers and civilian volunteers, tragic Marie Renet hasn't been seen or heard from since she crossed the threshold into the unknown on Christmas Eve last year.

Just what happened to the little girl has been and remains the subject of an intense debate.

In the final analysis, however, authorities remain mystified — but offer these three theories to explain her fate:

1. She inadvertently ran through a doorway between this and another dimension and is now lost in a parallel universe or some other plane of existence.

2. She was abducted by space aliens who used a transporter beam to whisk her up to their craft.

3. She was kidnapped by demons who used supernatural powers to make her invisible and spirit her off to their lair.

ARTIST'S rendition of Marie Renet being pulled through a doorway into another dimension.

In connection with a child but we have no other explanation," said Inspector Michel H. Bleiure of the police department in Mulhouse, France. "What happened to this child defies explanation. We only have theories." The only clues to Marie's disappearance were five small circles that were burned into the grass where the girl was last seen.

UFO researcher Roland Dalle thinks the marks were made by landing gear of a spaceship that was rendered invisible by a cloaking device.

But the Rev. Jacques Klein, an expert in the occult, believes the five circles are the points of a pentagram — a satanic symbol that is used to call demons.

Before she vanished, little Marie and her two friends didn't have a care in the world. Bleiure said they were playing soccer near their homes when one of them kicked the ball over a fence into the pasture.

"Her friends and mom said they watched Marie go over the fence and get the ball," continued the inspector. "They said she turned back, smiled and then just disappeared as if she hadn't been there at all."

ELVIS IS THE

THE EVIDENCE SAYS YES!

ELVIS PRESLEY was one of the greatest and most tormented performers who ever lived but was he troubled enough to fake his 1977 death of a heart attack and go into hiding? Dramatic new evidence suggests that he did just that — and will one day go public and tell the truth to millions of still devoted fans.

That's the word from author and Elvis expert William Stern, a man who has personally studied and authenticated dozens of photographs that have been taken of Presley in the past 12 months alone.

In addition to pictures, Stern has an audio tape that Elvis allegedly gave to a housemaid in Mexico City on December 1981. On the tape the singer — or his look-alike — vowed to return to The King's Graceland mansion in Memphis on New Year's Day 1982.

That didn't come to pass, of course, and according to Stern, it's a good thing that it didn't. The expert quoted Presley family sources as saying that Elvis was forced to postpone his comeback because close friends received word to threats on his life — and feared that he might be killed.

"Elvis was devastated," declared Stern, who has investigated over 2,000 Elvis sightings and written extensively on The King since his alleged death on Aug. 16, 1977.

"He literally plastered his comeback for months and chose New Year's Day as the perfect time to come forward and tell the truth about his whereabouts for the past 15 years.

"Unfortunately, friends convinced over 50 Elvis fans in the old days that he'd consider but to take them seriously. Elvis was forced to scrap his plans to return to Graceland and tragically as far as his fans are concerned, he remains in hiding today.

"That's not to say he will remain in hiding for the rest of his life. My sources tell me that he has literally postponed his plans to go public until he can get the proper security team in place.

"Meanwhile, I think it's important for everyone to know that those same sources tell me

KING ALIVE?

Elvis Presley's alleged death from a heart attack Aug. 16, 1977 been shrouded mystery since Weekly News blew lid off the in 1988. Now, the whole truth is coming out...

Elvis is well and safe. His life might have been threatened, but the chances of some lunatic finding him are slim indeed.

"I can't forget that Elvis has been on the run for nearly eight years now. If anybody knows how to make himself 'invisible,' he does." The startling news of a December 28 encounter with The King reportedly began when she spotted him in a mall, secretly took pictures with a Polaroid camera and confronted him head on.

But from denying his identity or running away, The King reportedly posed for more pictures and gave the woman an audio tape of his voice before he got behind the wheel of a white Cadillac and drove away.

In a no less unusual incident last July 19 a St. Louis newspaper photographed Presley standing outside a movie theater that was proudly advertising the still inside hits Silence of the Family and Truth or Dare.

Photo analysis commissioned by Sheila confirmed that the pictures taken by both women had not been altered or retouched in any way. And if that alone doesn't prove that Presley is still with us, this may: Waitress Ann Joe Johnson says she is to have met Presley in Corpus Christi late last spring and says that before he heard all an airplane and vanished, he gave her the keys and told to a 1988 Cadillac Fleetwood Brougham. No joke.

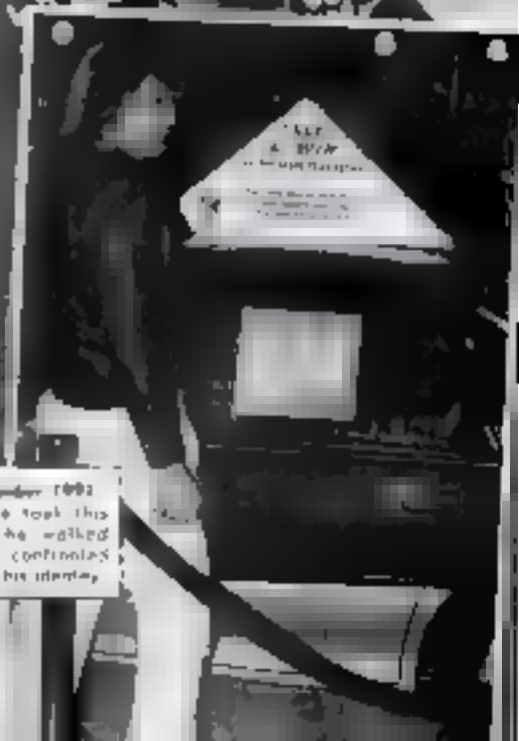
According to Sheila, the 54 year old woman said Elvis came into the diner where she waits tables every day for a meal. Before he left town he took the woman to a notary public in the border d addy and signed the deeds over to her.

In actual fact records show that it was registered to Jim Bizarros — an alias that El vis is known to have used for years.

Sheila said: "These sightings and stories here prove that Elvis is tired of living under ground and that his comeback has already begun. The threats on his life last year might have altered his plans a little, but there isn't a doubt in my mind that he will go public in the very near future.

"Sooner or later he will come out of hiding just like he said he would. And then the whole world will know that his tomb is empty and has been for the past 15 years.

ELVIS' TOMB at Graceland is empty and has been for the past 15 years, claims Sheila.



MACON GA. December 1992 a Georgia housewife took this photo of Elvis as he walked through a mall. She confronted the singer and claimed his identity.

SPACE ALIEN'S HEAD SHRUNK BY SAVAGES!

This artist's conception of the incredible shrunken head is based on a description by the explorer

Savage headhunters ended their close encounter with a space alien by lopping off its head — and shrinking it to the size of a man's fist!

Dr Franz Brebarti told a symposium in Antwerp, Belgium that the head is a near-perfect specimen though testing shows it to be almost 100 years old.

Even more compelling, the head has pointed, ear lobes like ears, scaly skin and oversized eye sockets unlike that of any other creature on Earth.

"The skin is brilliant green and scaly. The ears are long and pointed," the anthropologist said.

"And computer projections suggest that the eyes were enormous, at least two inches in diameter before shrinking.

"There's no doubt in my mind this shriveled head belonged to an extraterrestrial. And to think that it proves to us the savages so primitive that you'd be hard-pressed to find anything like them in man's history. It's incredible."

Dr Brebarti said he obtained the head from a tribe of headhunters in the jungles of Burma.

tain of hundreds of human heads strung from the walls of the chief's hut," he said. "He told me it had been the prize possession of his father before his death.

Even more interesting, he repeatedly referred to it as — in rough translation — Star Man or Sky Man. He gave it to me by nature, as he put it. 'The head isn't human.'"

On his return to Antwerp, Dr Brebarti took the head to a millionaire, Dr Maurice Guillaume.

"We knew we were up to something after taking the initial measurements of the features," said the anatomist. "We were astonished to discover the creature had eyes more than two inches across.

"But even more shocking, judging from slight indentions on top of the head, we can be fairly sure it had two brains. The only explanation we can offer is that it needed to accommodate the creature's weight and height."

Amazed the researchers' findings, Dr Louis Rouvin in a brief interview, he called the head fascinating evidence of alien life.

"Not only is it the discovery of the shrunken head is just the beginning of our understanding of

Among the [illegible] astounding mysteries to surface in recent memory [illegible] unexplainable reappearance of [illegible] survivors of the ill-fated ship Titanic, which sank in 1912. One, found in 1990, [illegible] a passenger on the ship. The other, found in 1991, was her captain!

The two were in perfect condition and had not aged in the years since [illegible] famous shipwreck. They believed it was still 1912, although [illegible] decades had passed since the tragedy.

Were these survivors perpetrators of a hoax? Were they ghosts? Or were they two unfortunate individuals who [illegible] become lost in an [illegible] time warp?

Scores of experts have interviewed the two, but no one [illegible] answer.

TITANIC SURVIVO

By [illegible] and Charles Bruschard

Captain rescued from lifeboat drifting in the North Atlantic!

The captain of the Titanic miraculously survived the sinking of his ill-fated ship in 1912 and was rescued from a lifeboat in the North Atlantic — 79 mind-numbing years later!

[illegible] discovery [illegible] shaken but healthy Capt. E.J. Smith on Aug. 9, 1991, came less than a year after another Titanic survivor, Winnie Coutts, was rescued from an iceberg and led some experts to speculate that more survivors might be drifting aimlessly in the ocean, waiting to be found.

"The way things have been going nothing surprises me anymore," Dr. Melvin Middleland, the famed mari[illegible] time researcher, told news men in Oslo, Norway, after Smith's rescue.

"I don't know what's happening out there in the North Atlantic but it defies the imagination.

"There aren't impostors we've found — these are people who were on the Titanic and should have perished when it sank, and we have absolutely no logical explanation for their [illegible] survival. Even stranger yet, they haven't aged a day in all the years they were at sea.

"Capt. Smith still looks like a man of 46 when we last [illegible]. He's 139 years old. And he still thinks it's April 15, 1912 — the date the Titanic sank."

The crew of the naval research ship Lyman Napier reportedly picked up Capt. Smith [illegible] southwest of Iceland. He was dressed in a crisp, pressed uniform of the White Star line and smoking his old pipe.

The European News Service said the rescuers recognized Capt. Smith of Loch Gold, England, as the Titanic's captain and sped him back to Oslo.

He was then taken to [illegible] Psychiatric Hospital where Dr. Jarle Haaland, [illegible] psychiatrist, began a battery of tests to assess Smith's physical and mental health.

In a terse news release dated Aug. 10, 1991, Dr. Haaland said: "Capt. Smith has been positively identified through fingerprints contained in his maritime records and is doing as well as can be expected, given the length and intensity of his ordeal.

"At this point our main objective is to deal with his recollections of the Titanic disaster and attempt to acclimate him to modern life."

Repeated requests for interviews with Capt. Smith have been denied and the captain and crew of the research vessel that found him were apparently under an official gag order, because they never talked about the incident.

Meanwhile, since Smith's rescue Dr. Middleland and other researchers have been calling for an all-out hunt for more Titanic survivors.

"Maybe they're out there, maybe they aren't," said the expert.

"All I know is that we've got to look."

Woman passenger found floating on an iceberg hadn't aged a day since 1912!

Winnie Coutts

Still another person thought to have perished on the Titanic was rescued from an iceberg in the North Atlantic on Sept. 24, 1990 — almost a year before the ship's captain was found!

Winnie Coutts, 19, was wearing the same clothes she had on when the steamship sailed from Great Britain for the United States and, amazingly, hadn't aged in the years she was missing.

"This is beyond eerie — this is surreal," said psychiatrist Jarle Haaland, one of 27 doctors and scientists who examined the woman shortly after her rescue by a Norwegian fishing vessel.

"As a doctor I'm wracking my brain to find a logical explanation for all this, but there's no logic to it. It's as if the woman has been existing in a time warp for the past 78 years."

Mrs. Coutts was spotted and rescued from an iceberg, 227 miles southwest of Iceland. Capt. Carl-Jorgen Rus of the trawler Poralupen told maritime authorities that the woman was soaking wet and suffering from exposure but was otherwise in good health.

He also said she was wearing turn-of-the-century clothing, insisted that the year was 1912 and repeatedly asked what happened to the other survivors.

Marine authorities checked the Titanic passenger manifest and confirmed that Mrs. W. Coutts of Southampton, England, had boarded the ship in 1912.

RS FOUND ALIVE!

...79 years after ship sank!

CAPTAIN E.J. Smith showed no signs of having aged — although 79 years had passed since the sinking of the Titanic on April 15, 1912.

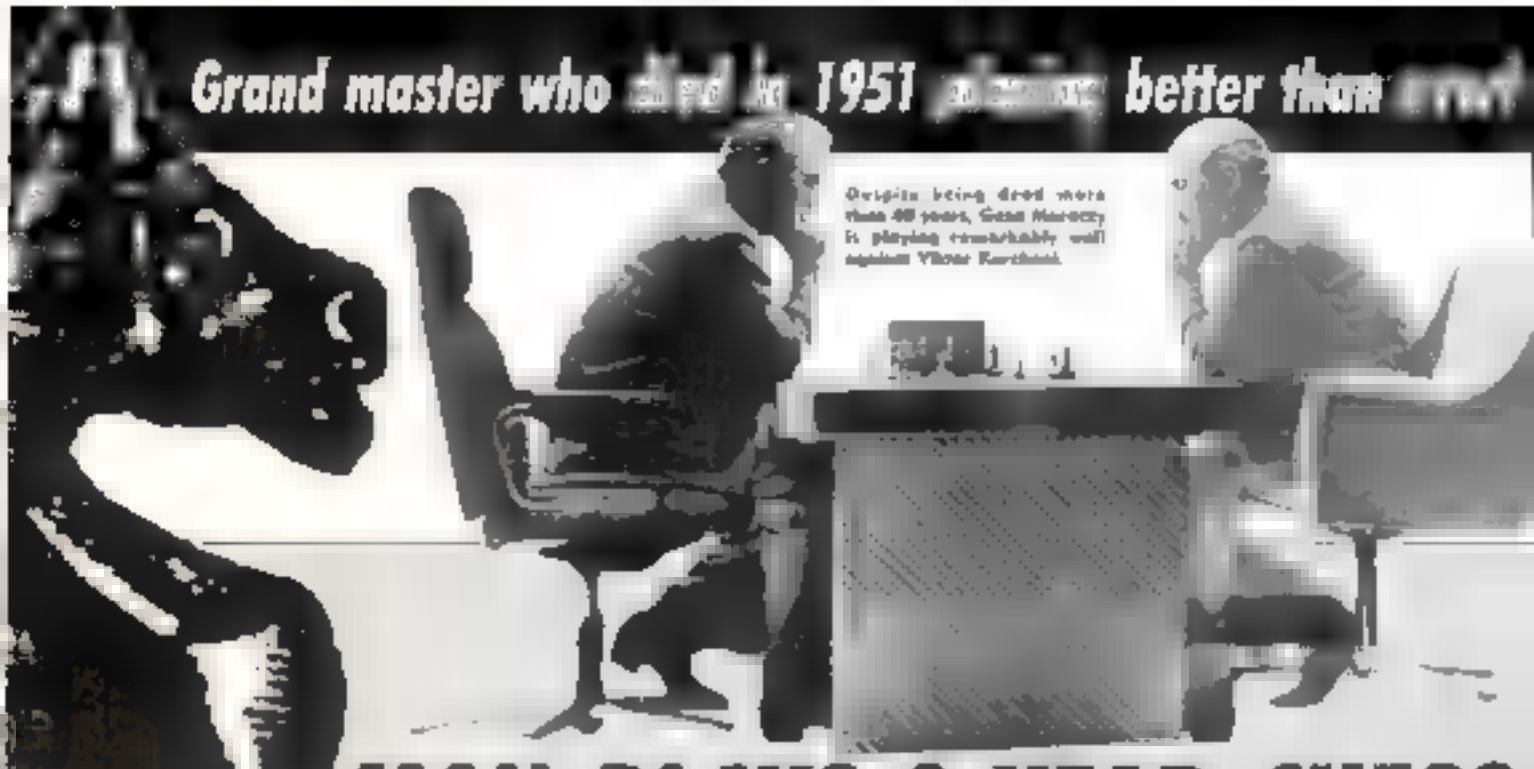
Grand master who died in 1951 playing better than ever



Despite being dead more than 40 years, Geza Maroczy is playing remarkably well against Viktor Korchnoi.

MAN PLAYS 8-YEAR CHESS GAME — WITH A GHOST!

Chess champ Viktor Korchnoi has been sweating through an eight-year-long match with Geza Maroczy -- the Hungarian grand master who died in 1951!

Korchnoi, also a grand master, has been playing against the spirit of the dead man when he's not competing on the international chess circuit, and the game is nearly over.

The two players contemplate their moves through a famous psychic and are evenly matched, but Korchnoi is optimistic about his chances.

"I think I have a good chance to win the game against Maroczy," said Korchnoi, a Swiss citizen born in Russia.

"It was an even match in the beginning, but onward the middle of the game he lost a piece and he got into trouble. He recovered, but lately he's got himself into trouble again.

"Remember, Roland doesn't even play chess. So when he calls with new moves it's obvious I'm getting them from a master — from Maroczy."

"And players who opposed Maroczy before he died say my opponent's moves are unmistakably Maroczy's. As far as I know this is the first time a champion has come back from the dead to compete in a match."

The chess match was first reported in 1980 when the two players were midway through their game. At that time Korchnoi appeared to be ahead but Maroczy has stubbornly held on and is close to pulling even. Incredibly, the two are still matching wits in what

2,000-year-old scroll foretold WW2, Lincoln's assassination — and date the world will end!

A 2,000-year-old scroll found along the banks of the Dead Sea predicts the course of human events until the end of time!

"That's the claim of Dr. Konrad Dick, who found the scroll and calls it the most important archaeological discovery in recent memory.

"This scroll is an astonishing piece of clairvoyance," the Zurich, Switzerland, archaeologist said shortly after announcing his find. "It told of the Nativity of Jesus Christ would have long before he was born. It also predicted the discovery of America by Columbus and both world wars."

Psychic twins have found millions in buried treasures

Psychic twins Adana and Kemala Brewer are uncovering vast fortunes with the power of their minds — finding deposits of gold, silver and uranium hidden deep underneath the ground.

That's the astonishing revelation from Turkish geologist Hasim Ozkan, who has worked with the 23-year-old sisters since 1987.

To date the twins have discovered 15 gold and silver mines valued at millions of dollars, and their services are in such demand that they've had to open their own office near their home in Ankara, Turkey.

And Ozkan says the twins have an incredible power to locate deposits of uranium ore as well.

"Once I took the twins to a site where a secret deposit of uranium exists," he said. "I merely asked them to find what I was looking for. They joined hands to focus their powers and in less than five minutes they pinpointed the exact location of the deposit.

"Since then they have found five new deposits and the government has taken steps to protect them as a source of essential raw materials.

"They are a national treasure in my opinion."

Ozkan says the twins have been able to find the deposits by using their psychic powers to "see" deep into the earth.

"They have the ability to see through the earth's crust and locate the deposits," he said. "They can see the veins of gold and silver and uranium ore

PSYCHIC FINDS — FROM 1,000

WHEN mountain climber Vincent Klink was lost on a frozen Switzerland mountainside, there was only one hope for his survival. From more than 1,000 miles away, psychic Helena Nubales, above, was able to draw a precise map to show workers exactly where the injured climber was!

Mountaineer Vincent Klink owes [redacted] life to a 20-year-old psychic whose incredible mental powers pinpointed the lost and injured climber where he was stranded alone on a treacherous mountainside.

The German restaurant owner was rescued in sub-zero temperatures after five days on a rocky snow-covered peak in Switzerland. To find him, rescuers followed a detailed map drawn by Helena Nubales more than 1,000 miles away in Spain.

In driving snow and freezing winds, the rescuers went directly to the spot where Vincent, 42, lay dying under a rock with a broken ankle and hand. The climber survived his ordeal and credited the psychic with saving his life.

"Without her I wouldn't be alive," Vincent said after his rescue. "I had given up hope of being rescued."

The amazing story of Vincent's rescue is dramatic proof of the power of psychic visions. Vincent was climbing alone in the Swiss Alps when he tumbled from a dangerous perch and plunged more than 450 feet to the rocky ground below. The fall knocked him out, but he came to later and discovered his hand and ankle were broken.

"I realized immediately that I couldn't walk or climb," recalled the native of Gütersloh, Germany. "I hoped rescuers would come for me."

Over the next three days, search helicopters passed the climber's last time and time again, but failed to see his frantic signals. After that, silence returned to the mountain: the searchers assumed Vincent was dead. On day four, a weakened Vincent prepared to die and wrote a last, loving letter to his wife Elizabeth.

She had waited in the Alps for her husband's return from the climb and sensed he was still alive. After frantic calls to friends she got the name of Helena, a young psychic who lived in Andalusia, Spain.

Helena had never been to Switzerland. She knew nothing about mountain climbing and she didn't speak a word of German — but she was Elizabeth's only chance to find her missing husband. The next day the desperate wife called Helena. In fractured Spanish she told the psychic of her terrible plight.

"When my wife told Helena about me, the psychic blurted out, 'He's alive!' " Vincent exclaimed. "She said that I had a broken leg, that I was suffering from terrible hunger cramps. She said I could be found in a green tent and that I was on an isolated side of the mountain. I had been lost for five days by that time.

Helena sent the sketch es and maps to Elizabeth by wire the same day.

Within hours, Elizabeth took the sketches to the mountain rescue team (incredibly one member of the team — Tulbo Negrini — recognized a rock cleft shown in the sketch. He shouted excitedly, "I know exactly where it is."

Negrini returned to the peaks by helicopter with four men. After landing, one of the searchers became separated from the rescue party. Negrini called his name and received a feeble reply from Vincent.

Vincent didn't find out until later about the amazing role that Helena played in his rescue. And when he called the young nurse to tell her he was saved she psychic said she already knew.

"After I saw you on the mountain, I was upset for hours," Helena said. "Suddenly at 4:30 p.m. on the fifth day I knew I didn't have to worry."

Vincent was discovered by the rescue team on the fifth day of his ordeal — at exactly 4:30 in the afternoon.

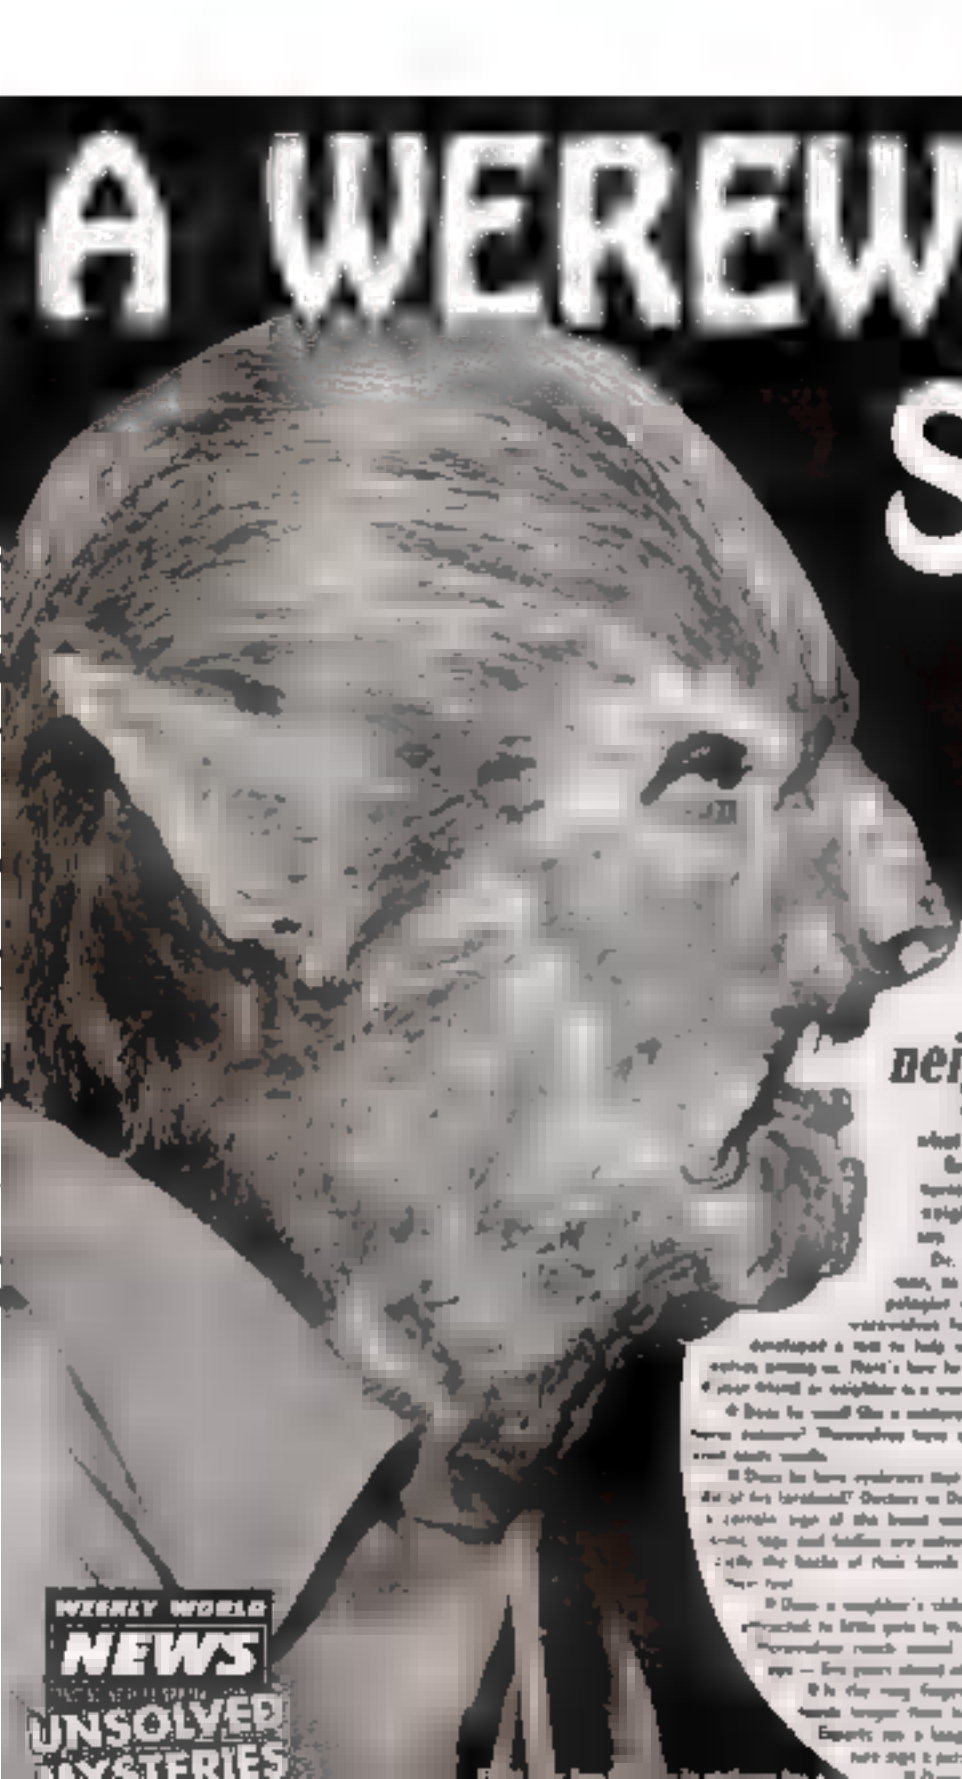
A WEREWOLF'S STORY OWN



How to tell if your friend or neighbor is a werewolf

Werewolves live among us today, but unless you know what to look for, they are impossible to identify.

Except when they're suffering an attack of the rare illness that turns them into crazed beasts, they look like any of your friends or neighbors, experts say.

Dr. Werner Bokelmann, an American anthropologist who has studied werewolves for 30 years, has developed a test to help identify the werewolves among us. Here's how he says you can tell if your friend or neighbor is a werewolf:

● Does he smell like a mixture of stale hay and horse manure? Werewolves have extra glands that emit such odors.

● Does he have eyebrows that meet in the middle of his forehead? Doctors in Denmark say that's a genetic sign of the beast inside. Werewolves' nails, legs and bellies are extremely hairy, especially the backs of their hands and the tops of their feet.

● Does a neighbor's child seem unusually attracted to little pets by the age of 7 or 8? Werewolves reach sexual maturity at that age — five years ahead of normal humans.

● Is the ring finger on both of his hands longer than his middle finger?

Experts say a long ring finger is a sure sign a person is a werewolf.

● Does he wear loose-fitting clothes? Werewolves grow extra hair on their bodies during the full moon, and tight clothes would be uncomfortable.

● Does he have a strong aversion to dogs? Werewolves are frightened by dogs because they're the natural enemies of wolves.

● Does he have a history of mental illness? Werewolves are sometimes driven insane by the full moon.

● Does he have a history of epilepsy? Werewolves suffer from epilepsy-like seizures during the full moon.

● Does he have a history of drug abuse? Werewolves are sometimes driven to drug abuse by the full moon.

● Does he have a history of violence? Werewolves are sometimes driven to violence by the full moon.

● Does he have a history of suicide? Werewolves are sometimes driven to suicide by the full moon.

● Does he have a history of alcoholism? Werewolves are sometimes driven to alcoholism by the full moon.

● Does he have a history of drug addiction? Werewolves are sometimes driven to drug addiction

CHILLING — IN HIS WORDS!

They call Bill Ramsey the Werewolf of London but the soft-spoken handyman has no recollection of the wild animal-like rampages that have landed him in jail or psychiatric units three times in the past 11 years!

"From what they say, I have my teeth, claws, snarl and snap and howl," said the 47-year-old father of three. "My life is a living hell. I go on all fours and my hands turn like the claws of a beast. I'm told I do incredible things, but I never seem to hurt myself.

"My God, people even said I looked and acted like the Werewolf of London."

Doctors now believe he suffers from lycanthropy, a rare condition in which the victim believes he is a wolf.

"Why this terrible thing happens to me, I don't know," said Ramsey. "If I could take a pill to stop it, I would. I don't like much more of this."

Ramsey's bizarre medical condition suddenly became public when a horrified psychiatric nurse left a police station in Southend, England, a seaside resort town near London, in 1971.

The screaming woman reported a man outside crawling and howling like a dog.

When cops brought Ramsey inside the station, he was howling.

"It was the most frightening thing I've ever seen," police superintendent Charles Harper said. "He crawled, howled, growled at the nurse, curled his lips back and bared at us with his teeth and fingers that looked like the claws of an animal."

During the half-hour ordeal, Ramsey hurled spit through the air, tore the station apart and smashed his head through a thick wooden door before he was injected with a powerful sedative and subdued.

"I only know what happened from what they told me and what I read in the newspapers," said Ramsey, who was ordered to undergo psychiatric evaluation at Harwood Hospital in Watford.

"The only happiness came in a dark room," he said. "It only lasts about 15 minutes."

Ramsey said he's been told he faces a choking recollection in the mythical werewolf depicted in horror films, but he shrugs it all.

"I've always looked this way," he said. "There's not a lot I can do about it."

Ramsey said the recent episode was his third since 1961, when he tried to take a friend.

During the recent incident at the mental hospital, Ramsey destroyed a hospital ward in what was described by nurses.

Ramsey said the attacks come with little warning: "I get butterflies in my stomach and I start shaking. I feel cold and terrified. Then the next thing I know, I wake up."

Ramsey acknowledged that doctors have diagnosed his condition as lycanthropy, but he knows little about the rare illness.

"I know it is someone who believes just like a wolf and that's what I do."

"I've always looked this way," says Ramsey. "There's not a lot I can do about it."

DREAMS / NIGHTMARES THAT CAME TRUE!

Everyone has dreams but few people pay much attention to them until they mysteriously come true. Here are three visions that did come to pass, one a moment of unspeakable horror, the other two heartwarming stories of hope and human triumph.

Psychic dream leads mom to her new son!

...halfway around the world

A haunting dream led young artist Jennifer Lynch on an agonizing search through a foreign land — to the starving little orphan who would become her adoptive son.

The courageous woman left her husband and her home in Richmond, Va., and flew to Romania after the strange dream in which she found the pathetic child waiting for her in a shabby old house surrounded by a wooden fence.

"I had this recurring dream that I found the boy," the 39-year-old woman recalled. "The sun was setting and there was a strange redlight around the house. I could hear dogs barking and see a long sidewalk overgrown with trees. At the end of this walk I would see my little boy, naked and Sleeping teenager Diego Goldoni felt the razor-like fangs of vampire bats slashing at his throat and believe the attack was over he literally bled to death — unaware that the creatures that killed him were mere images in a horrible nightmare!

"For 20 consecutive nights this young man dreamed he was being chased by vampire bats that were out to drain his life's blood," said Dr. Giuseppe Sikone, Goldoni's psychiatrist.

"All I can tell you is that the phantom images of a dream killed this boy. It's the darndest thing I've ever seen."

The mind-numbing drama began when Goldoni and his schoolmates visited a bat exhibit at a science museum in Naples, Italy.

starving. I didn't know whether I would ever find the boy, but I went to Honolulu anyway. Now we feel like it's destiny that brought him to us.'

The shocking search began when Jennifer — who hadn't been able to make heads nor tails of her dreams — neglected to glimpse the desperate little boy's face on a television documentary about orphans in Romania.

Suddenly the dream made sense. And she and husband Robert Lynch decided right then and there to give the child a home if they could find him.

Romanian officials told the woman she'd never track the tiny tot down. But she flew to Eastern Europe anyway, leaving her two small children to get things ready for their new son.

In Bucharest, alone and unable to speak the language, Jennifer was lost.

Fortunately, she had a photograph of the boy that she'd gotten from the producers of the documentary.

After two months she was at the point of giving up when she visited one last children's home in her hotel guide. Officials pulled out.

Miracle vision heals cripple

'A voice told me to get up and walk — and I did'

A crippled man miraculously stood up and walked after a voice in a dream told him to use the legs that had failed him for 15 mind-numbing years!

Peter Anyumba, 35, stunned the villagers of Migori, Kenya, when he strode into town and, in sheer exhilaration, danced a little jig.

"They couldn't believe what they were seeing," Anyumba told a reporter for the Kenya News Agency.

"Some of them thought I was a ghost. Others were so shocked that they turned and ran."

Anyumba originally injured his back in a construction accident in 1974 and was told by doctors that he would never stand or walk again.

He was able to crawl on his hands and knees, however, and managed to support himself by selling the shells of lobsters and cleaning floors at the Migori Inn.

"At first I had hope that I would walk and run again," said Anyumba.

"But as the years passed my hope faded and I tried to get by as best as I could on my hands and knees.

"I often grew depressed and wanted to die," he added. "I wanted to be normal like everybody else."

But Anyumba's despair turned to joy the night of January 7.

In a dream he found himself "alone in a dark place, aware of a presence I could not explain.

"Suddenly a voice told me to stand and walk," he remembered. "I was startled and wanted to pray away.

"But the voice spoke to me again. It said, 'Don't be afraid. Stand. Walk.'

"And I did."

A split second later Anyumba was a sight and realized that he had awakened in his home.

He was standing erect. And with a little effort, he started walking right away.

Dr. Rupert Jayce examined Anyumba and found no evidence of the back injury that had crippled him for 15 years.

"He's got the back of an 18-year-old," said the doctor. "And I have absolutely no explanation for it."

Although he spent all those years on his knees, Anyumba said he will happily get down on them again every day to thank God for the miracle that left him standing.

The blood-curdling tales were still on the young man's mind when he went to bed that night, said his mother, and it wasn't long before his screams pierced the night.

His father, Sal Graham, said, "We ran to his bedroom and he was sitting up in bed, thinking she'd seen a ghost. When we fi he'd dreamed that bats were chasing him through the woods, trying to get his blood. He said he'd tripped over a log and the bats were closing in — and that's when he woke up screaming."

Harrowingly, young Todd will feel the same awful dream for the next 79 nights.

"When his parents brought him to see me he was a total wreck," said Dr. Silsbee. "He couldn't eat. He can't sleep and begged him. He was just a little naked little skeleton. He was crying.

CIVIL WAR SOLDIER FOUND ALIVE — IN 1990!

Rebel infantryman stepped into time warp and reappeared 127 years later — in Georgia!

A wounded Civil War soldier found beside a Georgia highway in October 1990 apparently traveled through a time warp that snatched him away during the Battle of Gettysburg in 1863!

That was the mind-numbing report that psychiatrists who carefully evaluated a Confederate Pvt. Benjamin Franch after surgeons removed a bullet from his brain.

They even joked them that "he came here and belongs to the 19th century, more than 12 years in the past."

Those who found Pvt. Franch on the highway believed he was a mental case and declared him to be insane when his wound was treated.

But the last remains that a Yankee musket ball was lodged in "his left calf," said a psychiatrist in charge of treating the 29-year-old soldier.

And our psychiatric evaluation gives proof that he is telling the truth when he says he was fighting in the Civil War the instant before he wound up here. He continues to be mystified and disoriented about what more really happened.

One minute he's fighting in the battlefields at Gettysburg and the next minute he's watching cars and trucks whiz down a highway.

"At a young age a person's mind is very impressionable," said Dr. Emmanuel Tanay, a psychiatrist who examined Franch. "Perhaps the battle was so traumatic that it left an indelible impression on his mind."

Dr. Tanay said that Pvt. Franch's mind "is not functioning on all cylinders."

"He is not crazy, but he is not functioning normally," Dr. Tanay said. "He is not aware of the fact that he is in the 20th century."

Franch was found on October 1990 by a passing motorist who saw him lying beside a highway in Georgia.

Franch was taken to a hospital where doctors discovered a bullet lodged in his brain. They removed the bullet and saved his life.

Franch was then transferred to a psychiatric hospital where he was treated for his mental problems.

Dr. Tanay said that Franch's memory is "very confused."

"He remembers the battle of Gettysburg, but he doesn't remember what happened after that," Dr. Tanay said.

Franch told doctors that he was born in South Carolina on Aug. 26, 1834, and joined the Confederate army in December 1862.

He said his final action at Gettysburg Hill near the Evergreen Cemetery Gate on July 2, 1863.

"The Yanks kept coming back at us. They cut us to shreds," he told psychiatrists shortly after he was found.

Since the bizarre arrival in the 20th century two years ago, Pvt. Franch has remained under psychiatrists' care. He is still disoriented, has doctors say, and continues to endure great psychological strain.

"All we can do is help him come to terms with what has happened to him and adjust to the modern

AMAZING MIRACLE HEALINGS!

Medical doctors help thousands of people each and every day but nothing they do can compare with the baffling, and often miraculous, cures brought about by mystery healers in life-and-death dramas right out of the Twilight Zone!

On these three pages are classic tales of healers and cures that science may one day be able to explain — stories that prove beyond doubt that miracles are more than myth, they happen every day!

Psychic's eyes cure 38 dying kids!

A mystery psychic cured 38 dying children just by looking at them in one of the most astonishing healing sessions ever!

And he performed the miracle in a hospital where physicians equipped with the latest medical equipment had given up hope that any of the kids would survive the cancers that were eating them alive.

"He told us he was a pharmacist and lied about his credentials to get into the hospital and went from patient to patient like he was making his rounds," said Dr. Mario Dominguez, chief of staff at Olivenza Children's Hospital in Olivenza, Spain.

"We were terrified when we found out that the children had been examined by the stranger but when all was said and done it was clear that he didn't lay a hand on a single child — he merely stared into their eyes and cured them."

Twenty-two of the terminally-ill children showed no trace of cancer two weeks after the mystery psychic's visit to the hospital. Sixteen were diagnosed as having gone into remission, Dr. Dominguez said.

"To say that this man performed a miracle doesn't begin to describe what has happened," he continued. "The best medical minds in Spain equipped with state-of-the-art equipment and the latest drugs and therapies could do nothing for these children.

And yet this man did," Dido Carlotta de Salegui, 5 was dying of leukemia when the stranger came — and went.

"He was a nice man and he made me all right," said Carlotta. "He looked at me and smiled and said I would go home to my mommy. He said I was beautiful and he said he loved me."

Dr. Julio Carrascal, chief psychiatrist at the hospital, believes the stranger established an amazing psychic link with the children, then set the healing powers of their minds against the deadly cancers.

"It's not [illegible] faith healers around the world do every single day," said Dr. Carrascal. "From what we can see, he cured 22 cancer-doomed kids by unleashing the healing power that was already within each of them."

Authorities failed in every attempt to find the man, leading to speculation by some that he came from outer space — or beyond!

"No human being could have done what he did," said Renee de Salegui, Carlotta's mother. "He gave our children back to us when nobody else could."

ANGEL TOUCHED OUR SON AND MADE HIM WELL!

A grateful young couple say an angel from heaven visited their home and cured their son of the cancer that was eating him alive — and they've got the picture to prove it!

Experts who examined the photograph say it has not been altered and is definitely not a fake.

At least one theologian calls it proof positive that God is directly involved in the affairs of men.

"The implications of this photograph are almost beyond comprehension," said Dr. Philip Elder, a theologian based in Avignon, France.

"It proves that God created angels and sent one to His own home. It proves that He has an interest in mankind and is directly involved in our affairs.

"We may never know why He chose to send the angel to this particular family at this particular time. Maybe He wanted to remind us that He is a living, vital creator — not just a myth or figment of our imaginations."

Celebrities and film fans Klein claim to have captured the angel on film when he miraculously appeared at the bedside of their 5-year-old son, Patrick.

The child had been diagnosed as having a deadly form of leukemia and had been undergoing chemotherapy treatments for more than a year.

"Our family was living in the kitchen when we heard a voice coming from out of our son's room," said Mrs. Klein, 29, who worked to put bread a meal while her husband played with Patrick. His sister and their were playing like a war in a fight. I was terrified for my child. I'm sure he was going to die, but I will not die."

Fearing that a sudden fit, perhaps even fatal, William Klein grabbed a 35mm camera and snapped a picture of the scene.

"When the flash went off, everyone turned around and looked at me," said Klein, shrugging his shoulders. "I don't know why I did it. It was a reflex action."

"I asked him to explain why he had taken the picture, but he just kept shaking his head and saying, 'I don't know.' He said he was in the kitchen when he heard a voice coming from his son's room. He got up and took the picture. He said he was not in control of his actions."

The entire episode lasted less than three minutes, and the couple believe the astounding ordeal ended.

After doctors announced that their son had really been cured, the Kleins had the film developed and, to the amazement of everyone, there was a picture of the angel.

"I'm not a religious man," said Klein, "so the angel didn't look like anything I'd ever seen before. It was a beautiful, bright light with a human form. It was very powerful looking, but it was also very gentle. It was a very peaceful feeling."

Dr. Elder, who examined the photograph at the request of the Klein family, said he was convinced that the picture was genuine.

"I'm satisfied in my own mind that this was God's way of telling us that He is personally involved in our lives," said theologian Elder.

"I have no doubt that the angel in the picture is the same angel that appeared to Mary, the mother of Jesus, and told her that she was going to have a baby.

"The angel in the picture is the same angel that appeared to Joseph and told him to flee into Egypt with Mary and the baby Jesus because King Herod was going to kill the child.

"The angel in the picture is the same angel that appeared to the shepherds in the fields and told them that Jesus had been born in Bethlehem.

The lame walk and the blind see after clown visits old folks home!

TWILIGHT ZONE SHOCKER!

By GEORGE HIRSCH

A happy faced clown in a baggy suit and tattered pants made a surprise visit to a home for the elderly poor — and when he left the blind could see, the lame could walk and the terminally ill were well!

The mysterious clown, apparently known to no one in the small village of La Selvina, Spain, worked his miracles by laying his hands on the wrinkled brow of those he came across with his incredible power to heal.

"It was the most glorious thing I've ever seen or heard of in my life," said retired priest Mario Gutierrez, who helps care for the 21 aged residents of the home.

"He wore a floppy little hat and had a big smile painted on his face and his suit was a big red polka dot. He carried a tiny white dog in his arms and another friendly pooch went from patient to patient, wagging its tail and licking and kissing on their wrinkled faces," Dr. Alonso Garbalde, a physician, was at the home when the human faced stranger showed up.

"I knew the moment I saw him that there was something special about him," the 71-year old doctor revealed. "I had never seen him before.

"Yet he greeted every resident — even the staff — by name. There was no way he could have known them."

Dr. Gutierrez said the first resident he met was 63-year-old Magda Ramirez, a frail widow who had been confined to a wheelchair for almost a decade.

"She only spoke her name," Dr. Gutierrez said. "He laid his hand on her brow and smiled.

"The next morning I got the shock of my life when Mrs. Ramirez came into the dining room — without her wheelchair. She walked as normally as any woman her age could."

"She was only the first surprise. Every single person he touched that day was cured of whatever affliction they had. Mrs. Agnes Cortez, who had been blind for years, now has perfect vision. And Mrs. Inez Fernandez, who I knew would be dead in a matter of weeks from cancer, got out of bed that very evening and went for a short stroll in the garden. Now she has no trace of the death causer."

Amazing healer boy of Asia

A mysterious child healer has miraculously cured dozens of people of every description by absorbing them into his own body through his hands. Witnesses say Maung Htin from the isolated Asian country of Bhutan can heal any type of illness or physical deformity and has even cured psychiatric conditions like schizophrenia with his amazing powers.

"The boy is only 7 years old but he has extraordinary abilities," psychologist Khin Lwin wrote in a report on the child in 1981. "He places his hands on his patient, closes his eyes and mutters a prayer.

"Within moments the patient begins to look better. As he improves, however, the boy seems to suffer from the ailment that originally afflicted his patient.

"I have seen his hands shake violently when he treated a woman I got your whole healing a paralyzed woman, he got all feeling and movement in his legs.

"After some minutes of this he gives a shudder and returns to perfect health. It is clearly real, not a pretense."

Maung Htin was born in a remote village near Thimphu, Bhutan. Word of his healing powers has spread far and wide, having hundreds of sick and dying people to his home each year.

"Many doctors think he must be some sort of faith healer," Dr. Lwin wrote. "But he is not a priest. He is a simple boy who has been given a gift by God."

Adolf HITLER

Adolf Hitler, the lunatic responsible for [illegible] of deaths in World War II, did not die in a Berlin bunker in 1945. Stunning new evidence proves that he fled to South America and might still be alive today — at the age of 103!

Edited by SUSAN SIMSON and RICHARD LONG

THREE years ago reports reached a stunned world that Adolf Hitler didn't die in 1945 as had always been believed — but that he was alive and well and living in Chile!

Anthropologist Leo Reiff announced he had discovered the Nazi madman in an Indian village in the mountains near San Jose de, where he had hidden among the Indians since his arrival in June 1945. He was 100 years old and in failing health, but still alert, Dr. Reiff said.

After that shocking revelation came an other report that the Führer had been cap tured by South American Nazi hunters and was suffering from a serious heart condition since then, mystery has surrounded his fate.

"We know that he was able to escape Ger many after the war and that he survived for years living among the Indians," says Dr. Reiff. "And we know that in 1960 Israeli hunt ers were on to him, seized him and took him away. Eichmann [illegible] that he suffered a heart attack during the capture, but we have no way of confirming this. Since then we have heard nothing. We don't know now whether he is dead or whether he is still alive some where."

It was Dr. Reiff who, in 1987, stumbled up on the amazing evidence that an ancient white man dwelling among Chilean Indians and re vered as a living god was in actuality none other than Adolf Hitler.

The excited scientist called a press confer ence to announce his discovery and produced evidence to support his story. There were sworn statements of eyewitnesses and Nazi memorabilia recovered from the hut that Hit ler allegedly lived in for 44 years.

The anthropologist said he stumbled on the Führer's mountain hideout 30 miles south southwest of San Jose on October 14, 1986. The former German dictator had vanished in the late [illegible] and his fourth team ar rived in the village — apparently because he received advance warning. "Hitler was gone, but the evidence re mained," Dr. Reiff said. "We recovered a tat tered leather trunk that contained books, maps, two Nazi uniforms and Hitler's medals. The village elders confirmed that the property belonged to 'Adolfo,' a foreigner who arrived in the village with a woman and a child in June 1945.

"That's just a few weeks after Hitler and Eva Braun were alleged to have committed suicide in a Berlin bunker."

According to Dr. Reiff, the woman died of a fever in 1964 or 1965. At the time Hitler began [illegible] that's why she was thought would have been 63 or 64. The child also died in the mid '60s, according to the natives.

"I pointed that point Hitler had had little to do with the villagers," said Dr. Reiff. "But after the deaths of his companions he became much more active in tribal affairs.

He was especially fond of children and began to spend almost all his time with them. The Indians called him 'Doctor' because he took it upon himself to care for sick children. I showed them pictures of Hitler and they identified him immediately."

The Indians told Dr. Reiff that the 'Doc tor' was frail and crippled and was carried out of the village like a baby when he fled the an thropological team. A year later word flipped back that the old man had been captured by Nazi hunters and spirited away to Peru.

"We have heard he suffered a heart attack at that time, but survived it," Dr. Reiff said. "We've heard nothing reliable about him. If he is still alive, he'd now be 103, and that's very, very old. But if he had died, we almost certain ly would have heard about it. We're doing everything in our power to find out what hap pened to him. He is the evilest man on earth, and the world deserves to know his fate."

IS THERE LIFE

From the moment mankind knew fear, and the question of what follows death. Do we go to some higher plane? Do we see our dead loved ones? Or do we simply cease to exist?

Among the living, there are those who say they know the answer to this mystery. They say they've died and gone to Heaven — and come back. Or they swear they have had messages from the dead, clear contacts from loved ones that prove they are alive and well on the Other Side.

On these next few pages we bring you some of the most remarkable — and convincing — stories of life after death ever told. You won't forget them.

'I died, went to Heaven — and came BACK!'

Retiree Paul Gunst suffered a heart attack, died, and went to heaven — and then revived and returned to Earth!

The Muskegon, Mich. man died six times in 1986 when he suffered repeated heart attacks. During one of the comas he traveled to the hereafter and returned to describe his incredible experience.

"I departed from this life without doubt," said Gunst, 61, a retired accountant who told his story to The Weekly World News in 1987. "There is no way I could describe what happened to me from anyone I'd ever seen or heard of. I went through a tunnel and never will I be afraid. I died alone. I didn't really care if I ever came back."

Gunst's near death experience was caused by his problems with severe heart pain because the had [illegible] and then there in May he died each time but the last attack brought him to the gates of heaven.

"I heard a voice saying, 'Paul . . . you can't stay on heaven through that test.' It was my mother's voice. She used the name Paul . . . that was what I went by the year she died when I was 9.

"I was so absolutely taken by this and the peace and so ready I felt. I have never known anything so peaceful.

"I saw no one. There was only this voice. Then I came [illegible] a severe pain. The doctors had taken an ex[illegible] [illegible] and were shooting adrenaline straight into my heart."

After the experience Gunst described himself as a much happier man. He told The WEEKLY his death made him realize a few things about life he never knew before. "I told my loved ones, you shouldn't never wait to say 'I love you.' Material things don't mean much to me anymore. This changed my whole life and I feel very lucky this happened to me. Dead hubby sends messages to his widow — on his old typewriter

Dr. Karl Werner died in 1955 but he stayed in touch with his grieving widow — by writing messages on an antique typewriter that she keeps in her study!

"Unless evidence to the contrary can be found, we are forced to accept the fact that we have witnessed a supernatural phenomenon," said Hugo Stuber, a researcher of paranormal events who headed the investigation. The strange case began when Gretta Werner, a 58-year-old widow, woke to the sound of someone pecking on the typewriter in the downstairs study of her home in Lausanne, Switzerland.

"Mrs. Werner rushed downstairs and looked at the piece of paper in the typewriter," Stuber said. "On the paper she found her pet name, Bobo, and the combination of the lock on her dead husband's diary; things that he — and only he — could have known."

Frightened, Mrs. Werner called police who checked the house and found all the doors and windows to be secure. After several nights, Mrs. Werner put the incident out of her mind. But on a Sunday night exactly one week after the first incident she was awakened again by the sound of typing in the study. "I sat up in bed, just listening, and I could hear the sound coming from the study again," Mrs. Werner told investigators. "It went on for maybe 20 minutes, and after it stopped I was afraid to go downstairs."

Mrs. Werner said she stayed awake until dawn, then crept down to the study where she found a second note in her late husband's ancient typewriter. Amid a meaningless series of letters appeared the message, "Gretta, I am lost."

It was then that Mrs. Werner contacted her late husband's colleague Hugo Stuber, a professor of physics at the University of Geneva, where her late husband, Dr. Karl Werner, had taught literature. Stuber, who has studied paranormal phenomena for more than 20 years, assembled a research team of four scientists and virtually moved into Mrs. Werner's house during the six-month investigation. "We used four sound-activated video cameras to record anything that occurred in the study," Stuber said. "During the first nine weeks there were incidents recorded on an average of once a week. The tapes show a shadowy form seated at the desk in front of the typewriter and the sound of typing can be heard clearly."

Stuber said the message from Werner "indicated that the man's spirit was wandering in a state of limbo, trapped between life on Earth and eternal peace."

Stuber said he believes Werner gradually accepted his fate. "The final message to his wife said, 'I must go. Goodbye,' and no communications have appeared since."

Children who've been to Heaven — and back!

A little girl who lay dead for 35 minutes before doctors managed to revive her awoke and gave a vivid description of her visit to heaven — a beautiful place where she'd met Jesus and even sat on His lap.

The 6-year-old accident victim is one of countless children who've recounted near identical tales of the hereafter — and provided amazing new proof of life after death.

"Make no mistake. These children died. They went to heaven. And through some miracle that we may never be able to explain, they came back," said Dr. Robert Kelvin, who has studied the life-after-death experiences of children since 1981.

The expert went on to say that the stories these children tell are especially important because unlike adults, youngsters are less likely to be influenced by past experiences and notions of what heaven should be like.

The doctor said that in each of the 36 cases he has studied, children who were dead for anywhere from five to 35 minutes said they:

● Traveled through a long, narrow tunnel of light before emerging into a great glowing city.

In each instance, the kids said they had met a kind and gentle man named Jesus. Mind-numbingly, several of them came from villages in India and China and had never been exposed to Jesus or the Christian religion.

● Heard beautiful music and singing. Oddly enough, they also said they had heard the continuous tinkling of a child's toy piano.

● Were drawn to a fantastic, jewel-encrusted "tree of life." They said an enormous floating ball of yellow light told them to eat the sparkling blue fruit that lay on the ground beneath the tree. They said the fruit tasted like sweet melons and made them feel happy.

● Were led out of heaven and back to earth by a beautiful, golden-haired woman who called herself Grace. The children all said that the woman kissed them lightly on the forehead and whispered: "I am always with you."

"These children came from different countries and had completely different backgrounds but they all described the same life-after-death experience," said Dr. Kelvin.

"In my mind, that proves that all these children went to the same place after they died. And that place was heaven."

Horse with a HUMAN FACE!

Have scientists gone TOO FAR?

The line between man and beast blurred dramatically when scientists created a horse with a human head in one of the most sensational genetic experiments ever.

The result — a healthy, happy creature named Mannie — generated a storm of controversy. But the researchers who created the beast by planting genetic material from a human being into the egg and womb of a horse insisted that the potential all is said and done it's going to help us rewrite the textbooks on genetics," said Dr. Peter de Vries, of Amsterdam, the Netherlands.

"As an added benefit, the techniques that enabled us to create Mannie might one day lead to genetic cures for cancer and birth defects."

Contrary to what some people might think, said de Vries, "there was nothing cruel about our experiment. Mannie is as happy as any animal could expect to be," he added. "Other than his face, there's nothing human about him."
